Nurses Hold Final Sessions Today at Regional Assembly

Miss MacChesney, Miss Jacobson and Sister Berenice Feature Closing Demonstrations and Talks

Nurse Course

Albany Speaker Speaks on 'Isolation Cases' and Proper Treatments

Today's sessions, the final ones, of the regional institute of the New York State Nurses' Association featured talks on treatment of communicable diseases and the requisites for nurses to procure licenses. This afternoon featured a symposium on "What Is Safe Nursing Care?"

Miss Emma H. MacChesney of Albany, speaking at Kingston High School on communicable diseases, said that the "isolation cases," diseases that must be kept from spreading through contact with the patient.

"We must use reasonable nursing technique in view of what we know," said the speaker, expressing the opinion that some members of the nursing profession may fear contagious cases.

"My belief is that they fear them because of the lack of knowledge," said Miss MacChesney as she discussed the proper procedure in handling cases of malaria typhoid, measles and other of the common diseases of contagion.

Every disease, Miss MacChesney said, can be governed or checked by knowing the peculiar habits of the various organisms that go to produce it, and she urged the nurses to study them well.

Praising the up-to-date hospital training schools, with their equipment for studying diseases, Miss MacChesney said that student nurses have an excellent opportunity today of learning all about the communicable diseases and how to check them.

Miss Marguerite Jacobson, associate executive secretary of the New York State Nurses' Association, spoke at Epworth Hall on the license laws pertaining to nursing.

"It is easy to understand why a person who has such an intimate profession as a nurse must have a license," said Miss Jacobson, who explained the requisites to become a practical nurse and also a registered nurse.

In order to become a nurse under the law, one must be 21 years of age, have a good moral character and be or express intentions of becoming a citizen of the United States.

To become a practical nurse, one must have completed at least the eighth grade in school.

To receive a license as a registered nurse, one must be a high school graduate and meet the professional requirements through courses given in the hospital training schools.

This afternoon at the Governor Clinton Hotel a symposium on "What Is Safe Nursing Care?" was conducted. The chairman was Mrs. Jose Ferrer, member of the board of the Bellevue Hospital School of Nursing.

The complete program for this afternoon was as follows:

Presiding—Mrs. Ethel G. Prince, R. N.

Symposium—"What Is Safe Nursing Care?"

Chairman—Mrs. Jose Ferrer, member of the board, Bellevue Hospital School of Nursing

Participants—Consumer—Mrs. Walter Drew, president, Schenectady County Public Health Nursing Association

Private Duty Nurse—Mrs. Ethel Fuller, R. N.

Institutional Nurse—Sister M. Berenice, R. N., superintendent, Benedictine Hospital, Kingston

Registrar—Mrs. Loretta Doty, R. N.

Public Health Nurse—Emma MacChesney, R. N.

Physician—John B. Lauricella, M. D., chairman, Nursing Committee, New York County Medical Society

Representative, State Board of Nurse Examiners—H. Lenore Bradley, R. N.

Sister M. Berenice, superintendent of the Benedictine Hospital, this city, gave the following paper on "The Institutional Nurse."

"It is obvious that since the hospital is responsible for the care of the patient it is likewise its responsibility to examine the credentials of each one of its nursing personnel as well as to encourage each nurse who serves in any capacity in the hospital to apply at once for a license and to inquire into what will be required of her.

"Since the new practice act is based on qualifications, the hospital with an accredited school of nursing, assisted by a graduate staff has little or nothing to fear, is considered in good standing and is in a position to give adequate nursing care to its patients. Its educational program has been directed by the fundamental requirements of the curriculum formulated as a guide by the National League of Nursing Education. These curricula covering all of the fields of nursing sciences are a great advancement over the nursing of yesterday. We should indeed feel proud of the advances

'Too Bright' for School

Rated "too bright" for ordinary school, Alan Reed-Tookman, 7, (with violin) was awarded a scholarship at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston. He has a 145 I. Q. His brother, Richard, 3, at the piano, also studies at the conservatory.

Taubeneck Says U.S. Will Tangle In 2-Nation War

Director of Bronxville Forum Makes Statement Before Nurses Last Night at Kingston High School

"It looks as if Europe was heading toward a conflict within the next 18 months—and the United States will be in it when two major nations meet in conflict," said Ignatius D. Taubeneck, director of the Bronxville Community Forum and well known lecturer, speaking before the session of the New York State Nurses' Association institute held in the auditorium at the high school last night.

Mr. Taubeneck made the statement to a question by Mrs. Ethel G. Prince, president of the association, who presided at the meeting and who propounded the question at the close of an address on the international situation, in which Mr. Taubeneck characterized recent events in central Europe as a combination of poker and combat, with Hitler successful so far in a huge bluff, with his brother dictator Mussolini floundering and with Great Britain and France vulnerable and out-maneuvered. Mussolini and Hitler are "calling the plays" today he said.

For more than an hour and a half Mr. Taubeneck reviewed world affairs up to the present day, which he said was the 24th year of the world war. America is today, after 20 years, loaded with debt and suffering from unemployment, in the backwash of an economic catastrophe which destroyed much of the wealth accumulated since the Middle Ages, said the speaker.

As to what is to come, "Read Mein Kampf if you want to know what Hitler is going to do," he said, adding "Watch Hitler in South America."

"The law of the jungle has never been repealed," was the statement "and we are living in a world in which that law is in force—not the kind of a world that could be likened to peaceful Kingston."

Mr. Taubeneck saw things moving rapidly to a head, with Hitler determined to continue his drive to the East. Eventually he will meet Russia and then what will happen will depend upon whether or not Russia can and will fight—as to what Japan will do and what other countries are involved.

The speaker saw the hand of Lady Chamberlain, the actress taken by Great Britain in recent years, in the Locarno Pact, in the Munich agreement and the abandonment of Czechoslovakia and in other diplomatic moves.

He urged the people of this country to get rid of "barbarians of thought" to get rid of their indifference and to elect "young, intelligent public servants to office" in this day when "treasures are out, disarmament is out and neutrality is a myth."

The other speaker of the evening was Miss Helen McDonough, chairman of the private duty section of the American Nurses Association, who spoke on "Ways to Progress in Private Duty."

Miss McDonough emphasized the idea of service and the necessity of taking an interest in continued education. She said that the nurse who felt, when she received her diploma, that she "knew it all"

Carpenters' Dispute Halts School Workmen

A dispute over certain carpenter work on the new vocational school has caused a tie-up on the job and workmen have been called off the job by the local carpenters' union.

The dispute which has halted work is said to have been caused because of certain work which it is claimed has been done in the shop of James Forrester Co., of Beacon instead of being done by local carpenters on the job.

The local union claims the work should have been given local workmen instead of being done in the contractor's shop in Beacon by men in his employ there. The disputed work is in connection with the preparation of materials used in making forms, which it is claimed could be better prepared at the Beacon shop and brought to the job here. The local union claims preparation of the materials in Beacon has deprived local workmen of the job.

Police Ball Did $7,440 Business

Net Yield to Patrolman's Pension Fund to Be $3,200; Attendance 3,200

At a meeting of the Kingston Patrolmen's Association Friday afternoon, reports on the ball, featuring Rudy Vallee, showed a gross business of $7,100.00 with about $340 outstanding.

President William T. Roedel, reading the reports, said that when all returns are ready, the total intake for the ball probably will amount to around $7,440.

The expenses amount to $3,200, which means that when this figure is deducted from the $7,440, there will be a net profit of $3,240, and of this $3,200 will go to the police pension fund.

Mayor Conrad J. Heisselman has praised the police organization for its efforts to help the pension fund, which means that the city budget does not have to carry the full load.

President Roedel estimated that at least 3,200 crowded the

$67,000 Railroad Award Sustained By Supreme Court

Justice Gilbert V. Schenck Today Announces His Decision Sustaining Award Of Special Commission

Supreme Court Justice Gilbert V. Schenck today announced a decision sustaining an award of a condemnation commission appointed by the City of New York to investigate claims of property owners along the Esopus creek, into which the Shandaken tunnel of the New York water department flows.

The decision, which specifically relates to a claim of the New York Central Railroad Company, whose Catskill Mountain branch line runs parallel to the creek between Shandaken and Allaben, sustains an award of $67,000 made by the commission. H. H. Flemming appeared for the New York Central and W. C. Charles for city of New York.

The claimant in a recent proceeding attempted to have the order appointing the commission set aside on various grounds, one of which was that the petition on which the order was based did not set forth with sufficient clearness what rights the city was to acquire.

That proceeding was decided in favor of the petitioner by the court of appeals in the matter of Gillespie, 272 N. Y. 18. The court there held that the city had the right to the waters of the Esopus creek to the full extent of the capacity of the Shandaken tunnel, except that in time of high or flood waters, the city would not be justified in increasing the volume of the Esopus creek so as to injure the property of the claimant herein.

Many other legal points were involved in the issue, on which Justice Schenck in his decision of several pages answered in full.

The decision reads significantly in one part: "It would appear from the testimony in this case that the building of the Schoharie reservoir and the Shandaken tunnel has had no effect upon the matter of floods."

Human Needs Mobilization

Washington, Oct. 15 (AP)—The nation's 25th community mobilization for human needs began today. President Roosevelt opened an annual campaign for contributions to community chests by telling the nation in a broadcast address last night that there was as great a need as ever for volunteer relief and welfare agencies, despite the federal government's efforts along that line. "There is more than enough work for both," he said.

Fred C. Dressel and Clarence H. Harris of this city announced today they have registered at the Patent Office in Washington, D. C., a "Nu-Way Sign Maker," which is being assembled and distributed in this city.

Voters Turn Down Central School in Nearby Districts

Proposition Affecting Marbletown and Two Rosendale Districts Rejected by Vote of 465 to 412

Voters of the town of Marbletown and from the First and Fifth School districts of the town of Rosendale turned out to the number of about 900 to crowd the High Falls fire house and overflow to the street last evening when a proposition to form a Central School District was voted down by a vote of 465 to 412. Defeat of the proposition by 53 votes was attributed to a unusually large number of votes cast by residents of the two districts of Rosendale where it was seen by the vote taken that the proposition was not popular.

In addition to the voters from the school districts of Marbletown and Rosendale there was also a large number of spectators and the crowd was estimated at fully 1,200 persons. The meeting called for 7 p. m. was presided over by Ellis Briggs, chairman of the High Falls school district. Long before the hour of the meeting the hall was filled and the voters outside the building were informed of the happenings by means of a loud speaking device installed.

The meeting Friday evening was an adjourned meeting from a few days ago when a controversy arose over whether sufficient notice had been given. At that time Rosendale voters claimed they had not been given sufficient notice and an adjournment was taken.

Legality of a vote by ballot was raised by Mr. Smiley and on advice of a Goshen attorney it was ruled that a vote by ballot might

Billion-Dollar Utilities Construction Work Will Have Two-Fold Objective of Giving Power to Defense Centers and to Heavy Industries, Which Latter Are Reported Lagging

Washington, Oct. 15 (AP)—The administration's revised defense program, informed officials said today, is expected to tie in closely with its business recovery efforts.

The double-barrelled program already is taking shape around plans to stimulate a billion dollars worth of construction work by private utilities. This will have the two-fold objective of assuring an uninterrupted flow of power to vital defense centers in time of emergency and of pumping new life into the heavy industries.

The power program is one of several phases of national defense which are being restudied in the light of world developments. President Roosevelt indicated clearly at his press conference yesterday that proposals for a stronger army, navy and air force were being prepared for consideration by Congress.

Lock Haven, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP)—This community of 10,000 lays claims to the title of "Flyingest city" in the nation. A survey revealed that one out of every 80 residents either is an airplane pilot or student. The average for the nation, officials say, is one flier to every 3,000 persons.

Violation of Statute Is Too Gross to Be Overlooked Under Liberal Theory Says Three-Page Memorandum

Board Not Sure

Board of Elections Not Sure Whether Time Remains for Nomination

A decision given today by Supreme Court Justice Harry L. Schirick holds the one vote cast on the American Labor Party ballot by John Davide of East Kingston for Harry H. Flemming, Republican candidate for surrogate was illegal.

The decision given in a three-page memorandum stated in part: "These violations of the statute are too gross to be overlooked under any theory of liberal construction. The vote cast by John Davide is adjudged to be null and void and the board of elections will be ordered to correct its canvass."

Judge Schirick's decision follows a hearing on the issue of whether or not the American Labor Party vote of John Davide of East Kingston Third Election District should be canvassed as a vote for Mr. Flemming or whether the vote was illegal because of assistance given the voter by a lone inspector on primary day.

The vote, had it been allowed to stand, would have designated Mr. Flemming as the choice of the American Labor Party by a count of 17 to 15. It was contested by Chris J. Flanagan, Democratic candidate for surrogate.

It was contended by Democratic election inspectors in the district that Davide was given assistance by one election inspector and the name of Mr. Flemming written on the ballot without knowledge or notice of the other inspectors.

They contended further that the ballot was kept from their notice when the votes were counted.

There is a difference of opinion among members of the Board of Elections whether the American Labor Party has sufficient time before election to nominate a candidate.

John D. Sterley, one of the members of the board, said today, "I don't know what the situation will be."

Supreme Court—Ulster County. In the Matter of the Application of Chris J. Flanagan to review the determination of Harry H. Flemming as candidate of the American Labor Party for the Office of Surrogate of Ulster County, N. Y.

Ulster Special Term, October, 1938.

Flanagan & Kaecher, Esqs., for petitioner.

George F. Kaufman, Esq., for respondent. Robert G. Groves, Esq., of counsel.

Meanwhile, the President is de-laying his budget estimates for the next fiscal year until he can determine the probable cost of the program.

Year's Survey

The President said the re-survey of the nation's defense needs had been in progress for a year, but was brought to a head by events of recent weeks and by the receipt of technical information.

Officials said the power program contemplated early construction of generating plants and power lines involving expenditure of several hundred millions of dollars. Much of this money would be spent in the heavy industries, which some economists regard as the keystone of any recovery movement. These industries have lagged behind recovery of other economic groups.

Charles Edison, assistant secretary of the navy, told reporters the administration expects the utilities to make the necessary expenditures with possible aid from Reconstruction Corporation loans.

The President's disclosure that re-examination of defense needs included studies of possible mass production of war equipment was in line with War Department preparations to gear industry to high speed production of munitions in the event of war.

Military officials said they believed that with proper organization, American manufacturers could turn out as many airplanes on a mass production basis as Germany's mobilized industry and produce superior types.

(Reports in military and aviation circles have credited Germany with present world leadership in organization of its airplane industry on a basis for the quantity production of a war would necessitate. Experts say a present lack of standardization would handicap the United States in turning to mass production, but that this country has industrial and technical resources more than matching those of any other nation.)

Recommendations given Mr. Roosevelt, authoritative sources indicated, possibly would call for army and navy expenditures totaling $1,500,000,000 in the next fiscal year, an increase of about one-third over this year.

This is a proceeding brought pursuant to Article 14 of the Election Law to contest the nomination of the respondent as the candidate of the American Labor Party for the office of Surrogate of Ulster county.

Upon the return day of the motion and upon the adjourned hearing this court limited the investigation to the alleged irregularities in the voting at the third election district of the Town of Ulster.

The issue at the hearing was confined to the lawfulness of the vote of one Davide. According to the testimony, Davide, upon arriving at the polling place, informed the only inspector who was then present that he was unable to mark his own ballot, not being able to read and write sufficiently well. Thereupon the inspector administered an oath to that effect, and marked a ballot for Davide in the manner indicated by him, and placed it in the box.

The subject of assistance to voters is covered by Section 203 of the Election Law. This section provides for assistance to four different classes of voters. Class (a) refers to voters who at the time of their registration had taken an oath as to their illiteracy or physical disability, as provided by Section 167 of the Election Law. Davide clearly does not come within this provision. He testified the occasion here in question was the first that he ever asked or received any assistance in voting. There is no claim of any physical disability. Davide's appearance and performance upon the stand would contradict such assertion if made. As to illiteracy, Section 167 provides for assistance only to such illiterate voters as became entitled to vote on or before January 1, 1922. The testimony reveals that Davide became entitled to vote at a later date.

Class (b) covers cases of physical disability, and is therefore inapplicable.

Class (c) affects persons who

Seventy-Five New York Tugboats Idle, Strike May Tie Up Trans-Ocean Vessels

New York, Oct. 15 (AP)—Seventy-five New York Harbor tugboats were idle this morning and union officials declared they would tie up 75 more within a short time, aiming at 100 per cent effectiveness of the strike which began at midnight and may affect the movement of trans-Atlantic freighters and passenger boats.

Three trans-Atlantic liners were scheduled to arrive today and five were due to sail. All would require the assistance of harbor tugs.

Those due were the Nieuw Amsterdam, flagship of the Holland-American Line, the Exambion and the New York. Scheduled to depart were the Scythia and the Georgic of the Cunard White Star Line; the Italian Line's Vulcania; Noordam, of the Holland-American Line, and the Pennland of the Red Star Line.

Frankel, balked last night in an effort to stave off the strike for 48 hours pending new conferences, asked the labor and operators' committees to meet again today. He also asked Ryan to exempt trans-Atlantic ships from the tie-up.

Coastwise ships were not affected by the strike order, and if trans-Atlantic ships were excluded the brunt would be borne by oil, coal and other freight barges. Ryan declared utilities serving the metropolitan area would face a shortage of fuel, but Frankel said they could be served by the railroads.

Prior to the final conference last night, negotiations had been under way for several weeks, with the union demanding a $10 a month increase for captains and engineers, now receiving $200 a month, and an increase of $15 for firemen, deckhands and cooks, now receiving $95 to $100 a month.

Term 'Purge' Is Traced
Back to the Year 1649
The term "purge" dates back, to be precise, to the year 1649, and to an event in the Cromwellian revolution, which was destined to be far more closely connected with the foundations of our own country than any continental European event was, according to an editorial in the Washington Star.

In 1648 the Parliamentary troops occupied London, and King Charles I was placed under restraint. The house of commons was the only authority which could act, and its membership included many avowed royalists or royalist sympathizers. Hence the dominant faction, representing the will of the country as against the pretensions of the crown, decided to take steps to insure harmonious action. On December 6 Col. Thomas Pride was ordered to place his regiment in front of the house. He himself took post at the door, with a list of the objectionable members in his hand. One by one, about a hundred members were forcibly excluded. This proceeding, which came to be known as "Pride's Purge," having been completed, the Bump, or sitting part of the parliament, laid charges against Charles for treason; adopted a resolution asserting its sole right to govern the kingdom, without concurrence of the crown or the lords; and appointed a trial court. By sentence of this court Charles was put to death on the scaffold in Whitehall on January 30, 1649.

Among the Most Useful
Stinging nettles are among the most unpopular and, to be known, the most useful of weeds. From time immemorial, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits magazine, the fiber has been used to make cordage, coarse cloth, and even paper. Young nettles, thoroughly boiled, make a tasty vegetable, and the juice of the leaves cures blood-spitting and other kinds of hemorrhage. Chopped nettles mixed with their food makes fowls lay in the off season, and imparts a gloss to the coats of cattle and horses.

Boiled leaves of dandelion make an excellent substitute for spinach. Bleached, they form an agreeable ingredient in a salad. The root has valuable tonic properties, and is particularly good in liver trouble. Many country-folk consider this the finest medicine in the world. They mash the roots in a mortar, and mix with one-third their measure of spirits of wine.

Camomile, another composite plant, is very common on waste ground. The flower-heads provide the familiar camomile tea. Besides being a pleasant drink, this is a fine thing for indigestion. Coltsfoot is another relative of the dandelion, and an excellent cure for coughs. The leaves are either made into a tea, or dried and smoked in a pipe.

Naming Walls Walls, Wash.
Walla Walla is the second oldest city in Washington, some fur traders having settled at Vancouver before Lewis & Clark first viewed the district. Dr. Marcus Whitman and his wife were Protestant missionaries who located about 6 miles from the present site of Walla Walla in 1836, and their daughter, Alice Clarissa Whitman, was the first American white child born west of the Rocky mountains. There is a saying that the early settlers "liked the place so well they named it twice" because Walla Walla is an Indian expression meaning "many waters."

TOWNSEND PLAN NEWS
No. 31
It is indeed gratifying to this column to learn that what seemed like "the conspiracy of silence" of the press concerning the Townsend National Recovery Plan has been broken at last by a wide dissemination of the fact that this movement is sweeping the country from Maine to California. Many editorials are now somewhat fair in their treatment of it. But others still show an utter misunderstanding of the fundamental principles of the Townsend Movement. These editors have certainly not read the General Welfare Act.

For instance, the Townsend Plan has no provision for a pension, as the Press continually insists. When the government gives a pension, the pensioner can spend or use it any way he chooses. The Townsend Plan payments are ANNUITIES, granted on certain definite conditions, the chief one being that it must be spent within thirty days or it will be forfeited. With eight million people spending, say, $100.00 each month there would certainly come a marvelous boom in business. We insist this is no "absurd claim" concerning business. The question is sometimes asked what will happen to the young and middle aged if so much money goes to the old people—another utter misunderstanding. When the annuities of these 8,000,000 elders is spent for the necessities and luxuries of life, in every town and city of our land, the services of the young and middle aged will be frantically called for in stores, offices, factories and mills. Even the national problem of railroads would be solved without strikes. The railroads would have such an enormous increase in passenger and freight traffic that they would have no alibi possible for a 15% cut in wages. They could easily save as much as 15% in wages to their help.

If labor organizations were wise, they would all, as many today are doing, endorse the Townsend Plan, and its members join the Townsend Clubs.

Missionary Speaks At Sunday Service

The Rev. Ralph W. Sell, missionary to China, will be the speaker at the vesper service in Redeemer Lutheran Church on Sunday, October 16. His topic for discussion will be: "China Today" which will be an estimate of the effect of the Japanese invasion upon the Chinese people. The Rev. Sell comes amply qualified to present this topic for the fact that during the two years of Japan's undeclared war he has been living in the strife-torn area about the city of Nanking.

Together with his missionary staff he has been unceasingly active in caring for refugees and homeless children. He has had opportunity to get first-hand information concerning the manner in which Japan plays the role of conqueror.

Prior to the outbreak of the war the Rev. Mr. Sell lived in China as a missionary of the Lutheran Church; in that time he became a competent student of Chinese affairs and problems. At present he is home on a leave of absence and is taking advanced theological studies at Hartford Seminary. He expects to return to China in the spring of 1939.

The Rev. Mr. Sell was graduated from Muhlenberg College and from the Lutheran Seminary in Philadelphia. Throughout his academic career he was a classmate of the Rev. Russell Gansie, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church.

The local China Aid Council for Civilian Relief of which the Honorable G. D. B. Hasbrouck is chairman is cooperating in this service publicity. It will begin at 7:45 o'clock and the general public is invited.

Lively Puppets To Appear Here Nov. 1

Mr. and Mrs. Cedric Head and their "troupe," the Kingsland Marionettes, who appeared here last year at the Y. W. C. A. and were received so favorably by both children and adults will return to Kingston on Tuesday, November 1.

While the Head puppets are startlingly realistic, the secret of their popularity depends upon their creation of an illusion rather than a sense of reality. The audience will forget it is looking at lifeless figures 18 or 20 inches in height and the tiny stage will appear full size, with actors in proportion.

Mr. and Mrs. Head will present their marionettes in two performances, one at 4 o'clock for the children and one at 8 o'clock for adults. Both will be in the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Head feels that in children "you have the ideal audience, unspoiled and unsophisticated." And so he has arranged a special showing of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" for the young audience.

"But," he adds, "we have also found there's a lot of child in every adult. Few adults fail to enjoy a marionette show." The performance in the evening for the adults will be "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

Also on the program for the children will be several of the animals of the "troupe" who will perform their tricks.

The marionettes are being brought to Kingston by Wiltwyck Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Five-Year-Old Hostess

Maureen Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert N. Cook, of John street, will be hostess this afternoon at a party in honor of her fifth birthday. The highlight of the afternoon's fun will be the showing of a "Mickey Mouse" movie. At 5 o'clock the children will gather around the party table which will be attractively decorated in pink, blue and silver, with gay Mother Goose figures marching across the table cloth. A large, pink Jack Horner pie will grace the center of the table and will contain favors from which dainty pink ribbons will lead to each child's place. The guests at the birthday party will be Louise Curtis, Peter Rakov, Rosemary Conway, Charles Lowery, Mary Ann Dwyer, Charles Roach, Phyllis Krehner, Dicky Styles, Ronald Atkins, Michael Rakov, Bill Dwyer, Joan Lacey and John Roach.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, OCTOBER 15, 1938.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 9

This is the Transit Unification Amendment, allowing New York city to issue bonds up to $315,000,000 outside its debt limit, to buy up and unify its subway systems. The amendment is of little interest upstate. The principal vote will be in New York city.

Without its subways, New York city would be paralyzed. The transit systems, like others throughout the country, have been going through troublous financial times of late. The city has already sunk large sums into these lines in an effort to keep them going. It now proposes to take over New York city delegates uniting in support of the amendment argued that the debt would be self-liquidating.

Upstate delegates took the position that since upstate would not be financially affected, they would not stand in the way of giving New York city voters the opportunity to vote on this question.

HOODLUMS IN VIENNA

Apparently Christian civilization and Nazism cannot live together in the same world. Hitler's persecution seems to be getting worse than Stalin's.

The attack on Cardinal Innitzer at Vienna, and the wrecking of his episcopal palace by Nazi hoodlums, is the most disgraceful episode yet. The cardinal had tried to conciliate the Nazis, while holding to the essentials of his religious faith and the traditional rights of the church. He had even asked his people to vote for the Austrian union with Germany, and a large part of the favorable vote must have come from that support. He merely asked, for his office and people, such rights as are freely granted in almost every civilized country. But Nazism itself seems to have become a religion, more and more given to violence after the manner of Mohammedanism in its early days.

The saddest thing about this shameful proceeding in the once peaceful and humane city of Vienna was the hooliganism and cruelty perpetrated by boys and girls of Hitler's Youth Movement. There was no reverence, no respect for religion or law or decency, merely an urge to violate and destroy things usually respected even by heathen. What culture is there in a land where youth is reared with such ideals?

ONE MILLION ENOUGH

A newspaper sent reporters the other day to ask a number of men and women what they would do with $100,000,000 if they had Marshall Field III's recent inheritance. The people questioned were picked at random and represented a variety of occupations, including a sailor, a restaurant owner, a housewife, a garage mechanic, a jeweler, students, a truck driver, a typist, and so on.

They showed surprising agreement on two points. With only two or three exceptions these people said they would keep only $1,000,000, because that was as much as any person had a right to or could possibly use. All but two of the men said they would continue at some sort of work. The women said they would expect their husbands to go on working. Work was useful and important to character and should not be discarded.

Some of them thought they would travel for a while, or build a home, or buy a car, or all three. Better education for themselves or their children was another aim. The $9,000,000 they wouldn't keep would go to charities, hospitals, homes for crippled children, colleges, cancer and tuberculosis research, and similar philanthropies.

Talking about a mythical hundred millions is quite different from disposing of an actual hundred millions. Some of these wise answers might be tempted to a more riotous, or at least more selfish, way of life than they now imagine. Yet there is much reassuring judgment and good sense in the answers as given.

NERVES AND TRAFFIC LIGHTS

Dr. Howard Fabing of the physiological laboratory of the University of Cincinnati thinks that the green and red traffic light, with its sudden changes, gives drivers the jitters and so increases traffic danger. He would replace these signals with a new type already in use in Zurich, Switzerland, and the Red Square in Moscow.

It is a dial face divided into three sections, red, green and amber. A hand, large enough to be readily seen, moves across these sections as the hands move on a clock's face. The driver, or pedestrian, is able to watch the progress of the hand and knows exactly how soon the green will change to amber and the amber to red. Adjustments of speed can then be made promptly and safely without fraying human nerves.

It sounds sensible, yet it should be remembered that temperament as much as the lights themselves causes traffic trouble. The driver who is impatient on the "caution" light now may be just as impatient with the dial. It is well to improve the signals and devices which direct drivers along the streets, but such improvement should not lull anyone into the belief that the job is then done. The human factor in safe or unsafe traffic needs training and testing and persistent education in good driving habits.

It must be admitted, however, that the red-and-green combination without the intermediate caution light is dangerous and unfair to drivers.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.
 AN UPSET MIND

A large industrial organization in an endeavor to find out why so many of their leading employees failed to keep their work at a high level and finally dropped out of the organization, engaged a professor of economics to investigate. He found that while domestic unhappiness was a big factor, the greatest cause of failure to continue work on a high standard was ill health.

In other words, an individual with brains and ambition can only go as far with his work or career as his body will take him. And the unfortunate part of this lack of health is that so much of it is due to nervousness and tension which disrupt the normal working of the various organs.

Recently in the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Sir Fergusar Buzzard, professor of medicine, University of Oxford, said that one-third of all the sickness in Great Britain was due to causes that were not really organic. If he should be placed at the head of a great business organization, the first thing he would do would be to take on a whole-time medical psychologist to study his employees and their condition in health and deal with all cases of nervous disorder as they arose. The sick roll would rapidly become smaller, the certificate given to patients that they were suffering with general debility, stomach inflammation, and anemia, would gradually become unknown and the efficiency and happiness of the staff of the organization would be greatly increased.

Fortunately, medical schools are now fully aware of the importance of the health of the worker to himself and to his employer that more time is given to this subject than ever before. So helpful have been the findings by laboratory examinations—blood count, X-ray, kidney, liver and gall bladder, and other tests—that there was danger that the body, not the mind, was receiving all the attention. As an upset mind can cause an upset of the various organs and the body processes to the extent that heart, bloodvessel, stomach and other symptoms occur, it is only common sense that the upset of mind should be first treated, if these symptoms are to be made to disappear.

Neurosis
 Are you worried about an ailment that you do not really have? Are you bothered by symptoms or pains the cause of which medical tests do not reveal? Send for Dr. Barton's tremendously interesting and helpful booklet entitled "Neurosis" No. 103, explaining how the cure of ailments is accomplished where none apparently exists. Enclose ten cents to cover cost of service and handling and send your request to The Bell Library, 247 West 43rd street, New York, N. Y., mentioning the name of the Kingston Daily Freeman.

Don't Marry the Man

By JEANNE BOWMAN

The Characters
 Kathleen Gregory: peppery red-haired member of the Gregory clan, goes West in search of a right-of-way for the Golden Girl mine.
 Donald MacDonald: young owner of The Stubbins Boy mine, hates the Gregorys.
 Bridget: Kathleen's companion.
 Yesterday: The son of a miner breaks his leg, the daughter is sick. Kathleen goes after the Gregory doctor, whose services are free only for mine accidents.

Chapter 13
Pent Up Wrath

JOHNNY was a good sport, though a very white lipped sport. He wished they'd let him remain where he was, or take him home.

Tears smarting her eyes, she went into the Gregory store for "Golden oranges." They didn't stock them, nobody ever bought citrus fruit, excepting lemons, in the winter. The MacDonald store had plenty. She had a basket filled with fruit, rode back to the mine with the doctor, picked up her car and drove back to the cot.

"These are for the little girl," she told the mother when she had brought her the solacing news of Johnny's luck. "She seemed to like fairy stories of—"

"Where did you get them?" demanded the woman.
 "At—" Kathleen hesitated.
 "I know!" The apathetic figure straightened and hatred blazed from her eyes. "You've been fine, but get that fruit out of my house. I'll not poison a child of mine with MacDonald truck!"

Kathleen stood appalled. This mother would let her child do without what she needed, sooner than accept anything purchased from her enemy. She had forgotten she had said she would sooner sleep in the street than spend another night in a MacDonald hotel. Her hatred was a veneer; this woman's hatred had been ingrained through three generations.

"I'll drive into Carleton," she told the woman. "You'll accept fruit from there won't you? And I've other purchases I want to make."
 "Would you—the woman hesitated. "Would it be asking too much for you to take Grandma MacDonald with you? She's never been to Carleton."

Kathleen set out for the nearest town with two guests. In the town near Grandmother MacDonald, nearly smothered in blankets, her toothless mouth, wide with a happy smile. Beside her, brisk, alert and talkative was Grandmother Barkus, the other old woman's crony.
 Carleton reached, Kathleen spent half of her time shopping, the other half writing an air-mail letter to her father.

I demand you have every roof in Gregory repaired before moving. I demand you release Doctor Cleveland from that insane limitation. Give written permission for him to attend all Gregory people free of charge. He's more than willing.
 This is enough for now. I'll tell you what else is needed in my next letter. The missive was hurried east by air.

Epidemic

IT WAS after dark when Kathleen returned to Neutrality. Depositing the old women at their respective cots, she stopped at the young MacDonalds. Doctor Cleveland was there. He drew Kathleen outside.

"You seem capable of getting what you want," he began. "I wish you'd find a way to permit me to care for this child. She's going into pneumonia if she isn't taken out of that damp hole and given proper nursing."
 "Bring her to my place," answered Kathleen promptly. "It's as big as a barn, but it is dry and we've plenty of fuel. I'll take care of her."

An anxious Bridget, who had seen Kathleen back the car out of the barn and drive off: who had since received word of her dash around Neutrality down to the Golden Girl; then setting forth to Carleton; opened the front door to find her standing there, cheeks white, eyes black with determination.

Behind Kathleen stood a man, a child wrapped in blankets in his arms. Behind the man was a nurse. "I'll open the parlor," greeted Bridget with quick understanding. "A steady fire in the living room will keep it at the right temperature."

Laura MacDonald was the first victim of the influenza epidemic which struck Neutrality; especially the Gregory side, only an isolated case or two reaching the MacDonalds.
 Within four days the old Gregory house had been turned into a hospital. Bridget and Kathleen alternating shifts, each with a hospital nurse.

By silent mutual consent, a barrier of silence was thrown about the activities and not until the fourth day did Kit-Smyth learn what was taking place.

By Mary Graham Bonner—Willy Nilly's Fear

WILLY NILLY wished he had not stopped. They were bound for home. Everything was in good order. They had had a lovely vacation. They had been delayed, but for good reasons. And now he only longed for Puddle Muddle, and he knew it was what his Puddle Muddlers felt.

He spoke quickly to the couple. "You do not know me. There is nothing I can do for you. I'm very sorry."

Willy Nilly was fearful and he spoke quickly. He could not possibly imagine what was wanted of him and he did not see anything about them that needed help. They looked tired and rather sad, but perhaps he had only thought that in the first place. It was best to keep going.

"You haven't a flat tire, or anything, have you?" asked Willy Nilly. "Well, then, I must be on my way. Don't apologize for having made a mistake. Good day, good day."

"Please, oh please, wait a moment," urged the man.

"You must, you must!" cried the woman.

Willy Nilly hesitated.

"Will you hear about you and how you turned in the fire alarm," the man said hurriedly. "We live on a farm just a little distance beyond. Some one came to see us this morning and told us all about your animals, how they can understand you, how wonderful they are."

Willy Nilly was immensely relieved. "Go on," he said. The man and woman looked less tired, less sad.

"We'll tell you why we're stopping here. It's because of our little girl." This was becoming a mystery.

"Please, please do not leave without hearing us. We beg it of you. Oh, be kind, be kind. Stay for a little while, it won't be long."

Willy Nilly was as puzzled as he could be.

Y.M.C.A. Business

Men Hold Meeting

The "Y" Business Men's Social Club of the Kingston Y. M. C. A. held its first dinner meeting of the fall in the banquet hall of the "Y" and made plans for a busy season. Clarence F. Wolfersteig, acting chairman, presided and also filled the assignment of master of ceremonies for the entertainment.

After the dinner served by Mrs. Dubois and Mrs. Burger, the club members came through "The Tablins," Gordon Craig, Jr., and Clifford and Herbert Every with their electric and strum guitars. Following this number the three Smith Sisters, Madeline, Muriel and Dorothy Smith, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Warren F. Smith, presented their midwest "Colored Minstrel Revue." Their songs and patter kept the spot merry and when they singled out Ad Jones for assistance, this high score was entertained with a "The strike" and shared the applause with the young ladies.

By-laws were adopted and elections will be held at the November meeting, November 11, when the nominating committee appointed by Chairman Wolfersteig will present a list of nominees.

Meetings of the club, which is made up of men of the city and the "Y" who are interested in the "Y" will be held on the second Thursday of each month at 6:15 o'clock in the evening. Programs will be arranged for a season of entertainment. There will be community singing with Ed Ward at the piano so that everybody may have a part in the program.

By PRESTON GROVER
 WASHINGTON—Pressure from New Deal and conservative sources alike is bearing down already to force congress to act this coming session on one of the toughest dishes on its bill of fare—legislation eliminating tax exemption from salaries and securities of state and federal governments.

By a long series of decisions beginning with Chief Justice John Marshall, the supreme court has held that the federal government can tax its own employees and securities but not tax those of the states. In turn, the states cannot tax those of the federal government. The result has been a huge no-man's land in which billions in capital has hidden from the tax gatherer.

Supporters of such exemptions argue that with the power to tax state securities and salaries, the federal government could hamstring the states by discriminatory taxes and so destroy the dual state-federal system of government. Answering argument is that members of congress, who enact tax legislation, never would permit destruction of their own state governments.

Previous Attempts Failed

REPEATED efforts to break down this barrier by simple legislation have failed. In 1913 the constitution was amended to permit the federal government to tax income "from whatever source derived."

To many lawyers, including President Roosevelt, that language is broad enough to permit federal taxes on any sort of income, including state salaries and interest on state bonds. But when a inevitable test case arose three years later the court took a different view.

The court went back to the congressional debates on the amendment and decided that congress intended only to nullify an old constitutional requirement that federal taxes should be levied upon the states according to population. That old provision had barred income taxes because they brought largest in the big business states, such as New York.

The court held that the amendment was not designed to reach NEW sources of taxes, such as salaries and securities. Many lawyers then and now agreed with them. Justices Brandeis and Holmes dissented, and the president dissented.

An Unplucked Tax Melon

BECAUSE of the decision a vast field of income now is taxed not at all or only by one governmental division.

Senator Byrd of Virginia, conservative though he is, began the drive in 1937 to break down the tax doors and the President put his weight behind it last session. Byrd declares an amendment is necessary but the President seems to think the present court might reverse the old decision. In that case a simple act of congress would accomplish the work.

As it stands now, 37 billion dollars of federal securities, paying approximately a billion a year in interest, is exempt from state taxes. (Most of this debt is not taxed by the federal government either, but a simple act of congress can change that.)

In addition, it is shown by figures from official sources quoted by Senator Byrd, 800,000 federal employees drawing $1,500,000,000 in salary are exempt from state taxes while 4,000,000 state and local officials, with their six billion dollar payroll, do not pay federal taxes.

Various sources indicate approximately 60 billion of public securities, paying interest of two billion or more yearly, are exempt in part from federal and state levies. The bulk is in the hands of private corporations or individuals.

A stiff fight is ahead. Legislation ending such exemptions not only subjects a congressman's salary to state taxes but brings upon his neck the myriads of federal employees who don't want to pay state taxes, and state employees who don't want to pay federal. Big and little investors in tax-exempt securities will be there to kick.

Imagine a menace like that coming up in an election year.

Man About

Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—Here's a survey of women in the New York news—it's all about blondes, brunettes, redheads, covering everything from the arts to dish-washing.

Among the architectural victims of the recent hurricane was the home of Katharine Hepburn's father, at Saybrook, Conn. It was tossed a mile by the tempestuous winds and completely demolished.

Mary Trevelyan, a hat-check girl in a Manhattan nightclub, has sold a manuscript to a publisher based on "what a hat-check girl sees." It's supposed to be mildly sensational. Almost 40 per cent of Broadway press-agents are women. Among them you will find such names as Helen Deutsch, Elise Chisholm, Phyllis Perlman, Constance Hope Jean Dalrymple, Dorothy Ross, Dorothy Kay, and Hazel Flynn.

Dogs Bite Cows

Elyria, O. (AP)—Biting cows about the head is the latest deprecation of stray dogs in Lorain county which gives farmers many anxious moments—and the sheriff's office much extra work. The cows have been bitten at night while tethered in pastures.

Old Stone Houses of Rochester and Some of the Men Who Lived in Them

By J. HARTLEY TANNER

There were, in the Town of Rochester, Ulster county, New York, many old stone houses built by the early settlers. A few remain unchanged; some have been modernized by the addition of porches, dormer windows, and other improvements; while others have fallen into ruins or disappeared.

Nearly all of them were of the same design and construction, having massive stone walls, pierced by a few small windows, and a door or two, with a cellar and "cellar kitchen," partly underground. Huge oaken beams supported the main floor, which usually consisted of two rooms separated by a hall. At the gable ends, were two great stone chimneys with ample fireplaces, one of which opened into a Dutch oven, whose turtled back extended outward beyond the main walls of the building. Above all was the attic or garret, a great unfinished room under the sloping rafters of a steep Dutch roof. This was a general store-room, and the sleeping quarters for the family.

Five years after the discovery of the Hudson river, a small fort or "Rondout" was built as a trading post at the mouth of the creek which now bears that name. However, there were no white settlers in Ulster county until the spring of 1654, when Thomas Chambers formed a colony of 15 families at Winfield, now Kingston. Attracted by the fertility of the Esopus and Rondout valleys, pioneers soon pushed westward and a settlement grew up at "Nieuw Dorp," the early name for Hurley. A few ventured as far as "Morrelton," Marletown, and Mombacuss, the early name for Rochester.

The first land papers at Albany record the following: "September 4, 1676, Thomas Quick at ye Mombacuss and ye Ronduv river." This was 22 years after the settlement at Kingston and 100 years before the Revolution. He was a resident of Rochester in 1679 as shown by the birth of a son, Jurriaen. In 1684, he bought another tract between the "Mombacuss and the Rondout" of a divided Indian named Harmon He-kon, who was to build a house and surround it with a palisade. Later, he sold this farm and moved to Minisink, while his sons, Jurriaen and Johannes, remained on the original grant. According to tradition, Tom Quick was murdered by Indians at Minisink, but there is reason to believe that this was Tom Quick, second, and not the original settler. In the Indian story, a record of this tragedy, Tom, his father and his brother-in-law were attacked by "Indians who had eaten at our table." The father was killed, and the others barely escaped capture. Tom vowed to avenge the death of his father, and soon an opportunity was presented. Tom was at a tavern when an Indian by the name of Mushwink appeared. Under the influence of liquor, he boasted of having been one of the party who killed Tom's father, and even mimicked the cries of the old man in his death agony. He also displayed buttons taken from the clothing of his victim. Tom seized a musket and drove Mushwink before him into the night. When he returned, he had the buttons, and Mushwink was never again seen. Tom lived to an old age and sent many redskins to the happy hunting ground. A monument to his memory has been erected at New Milford, Pa.

Thomas Quick seems to have been the first on record to obtain a land grant in the Town of Rochester; but there were nearly a dozen others who took land prior to 1700, among whom were the following: Charrat Claassen, Aaron Franse, Teunis Jacobs, Tjerk Claassen, Dewitt, Leonard Cole, Peter Hilbrandt, Gysbert Albert, Nicholas Antoine, Jan Gerretse Decker, Peter Cole, Roe-loff Hendricks VanVleet, Leonard Beckwith, Humphrey Davenport. Which of these actually resided upon their holdings cannot be ascertained, but, prior to 1700, there were a considerable number, as the following seems to show: Domonico John Petrus Nucella, the new minister of the Dutch Reformed Church at Kingston, arrived from Amsterdam December 15, 1698, and "immediately commenced to preach at Kingston, Hurley, Marletown, and Mombacuss (Rochester)," so we must assume that he had an audience.

With spire and pillars in front was erected. Lightning destroyed this building, and the one following was burned through a defective furnace. The present church is the sixth place of worship to stand on the same spot. This organization has an unbroken record of service to the present time. At first it was a branch of the Kingston Church and was served by their ministers, but, in 1750, it was separated and allowed to manage its own affairs. Then it joined with Wawarsing and Marletown in calling a minister of their own, but much delay and great difficulty was experienced in the matter. Jacobus Frelinghuysen, a student, was sent to Holland by three churches to complete his studies at the University of Utrecht. He was finally licensed and ordained by the Classis of Amsterdam, and sailed for America, but his ship was lost at sea. Next, an effort was made to have his brother, Henricus Frelinghuysen, ordained in his stead. After much delay and a long correspondence with the Classis of Amsterdam, he was licensed and promised ordination, "after three years of faithful service." Two weeks after assuming his duties, he was stricken with smallpox and died. In accordance with the custom of the time, he was buried beneath the pulpit of the church at Marletown, which stood in the north end of the old cemetery at that place. The roadside marker shows the location.

Now, we shall give more definite consideration to some of the individual old stone houses of the Town of Rochester. Leaving Kingston on route 209 toward Ellettsville, we enter the town near Winfield Corners, at a distance of about 14 miles from Kingston. A sign at the crossroads bears the inscription: Winfield Corners—1732. This locality was formerly known as "The Sahler Neighborhood" and there are several old stone houses within a half mile of the place.

Abraham Sahler, an early member of the family, lived just over the line in Marletown, and owned a large tract of land in the vicinity. His daughter married John Merritt, and, as a dowry, he gave her a farm and built her a house. This old stone house may be seen some distance north of the road as you approach Winfield Corners. Aside from an addition, the place retains much of its original appearance. It passed to John Merritt, who was unmarried and thence to Nellie James, a niece. It is now owned by M. Jansen.

The old stone house at the crossroads—Winfield Corners—was built by an ancestor of that family, whose name I have been unable to ascertain; but it is certain that James R. Winfield was born here in 1811, and left the place to his son, John Davis Winfield.

Not far from the corner on the crossroad to Kyserike, is another old stone house built and occupied for many years, by the Sahler family, but I am unable to learn the name of the builder. Many additions and changes have been made, but the original walls are intact. It passed successively through the hands of Feeny, VanWagenen, Rankin, and is now owned by Mrs. Webb. It is surrounded by a flower garden, and screened from the road by a vine-covered wall.

Back on the concrete, a few hundred yards southward, we notice red-roofed buildings, somewhat back from the road. This was the home of Judge Richard W. Davis, and was built by him in 1784, as is attested by a stone over the doorway with this inscription—R. W. D. 1784. A silver spoon found in the yard by the present owner bears the same date.

The preaching of the Rev. John Petrus Nucella in 1695 is the first record of Divine worship at Mombacuss, and may be considered as the birth of the Rochester Dutch Reformed Church. About 1700, a log church was built on the land of Thomas Quick, and in 1714, a deed was executed by his sons, Jurriaen and Johannes, which states that a church then existed. In 1743, it was replaced by a stone church, and later by a second stone church, which contained "modern improvements." The congregation grew and prospered, so just before the Civil War, a more pretentious structure in the Millbrook road with route 209, stood a Colonial tavern, the place of many early gatherings. While one of these meetings was in progress, a ragged beggar appeared in the distance. Yes, his appearance did seem familiar, and as he came nearer, they recognized their old friend, Silas Bouck, returned after 14 months captivity. The original walls of this building are standing, although a second story and another roof have greatly changed its appearance. It is identified by a roadside marker.

Half a mile beyond, south of the road, and nearly opposite a schoolhouse, is a long rambling building of great age, said to have been built by the Hoornebeek family. Aside from dormer windows, there have been few changes in the outward appearance. It is now the property of Albert Myers. There is no date on the building, but the Hoornebeeks were very early settlers. In 1709, Anthony and Joost Hoornebeek obtained water rights from the Trustees of the Town of Rochester; and one mile west of this house built a mill and the usual stone house. A sawmill and a feed mill still exist at this place, and the old stone house is in good condition. At present it is owned by LeRoy Dunn. In a neglected plot nearby are stones with initials and dates, marking the last resting place of this family of early settlers.

Back on the concrete, and near the foot of the hill leading into Kerhonkson, is the old stone house occupied for many years by "Bully Chipp" and his son "Manny," who lived alone and worked their farm. Few people knew them by any other name, but I believe that rightly they should have been called Joseph and Henry.

The stone work, and a wood, in addition, both seem very old, but I am unable to learn the date of the building. However, there is good reason to believe that it was built by a member of the VanLeuven family, as that was Mrs. Chipp's family name, and the place came from her father. It is now owned by Oscar Green, and is the last house in the Town on 209.

We shall now consider some of the old stone houses in the vicinity of Whitfield, known as Newtown in Colonial days. About one mile north of Accord is Canyon Lake Farms, settled by the Westbrooks. Jonathan Westbrook was an officer in the army of Oliver Cromwell, and came to this country about 1660, and later settled in the Town of Rochester. We believe this to be the spot, as in 1706, his son, Derick Westbrook, asked for a grant "in addition to that which he already owned." At the falls on the stream, he built a mill and a fine stone house which has been modernized, and as it is today, surrounded by fine old trees, presents a very pleasing picture. The old Mill has entirely passed away, except the old millstone which is preserved as a relic of the past.

Now it is quiet, but once it ground out flour for the surrounding neighborhood. Roads were poor and travel difficult, so many times a youngster was sent to the mill with a bag of grain over the horses back. Wessel Broadhead Westbrook was a grandson, commonly known as "Broady Westbrook," who lived here for many years. It passed into the hands of Tuntis H. Duryea and thence to James Lounsbury, who married his daughter. The present owners are the Marshall family.

About one mile farther north at Whitfield, is the residence of Lincoln Dunn. This is another very old stone house, originally having been the home of David Hoornebeek. The steep sloping roof has been extended so as to form a porch on one side and one end, which constitutes the only exterior change. The inside arrangement is the same, but black walnut finishings have taken the place of the original pine.

A few hundred yards north, on the same side of the road, is the Dupuy place. Records show that in 1730, Ephraim Dupuy built a house about two miles north of Rochester, and we have good reason to believe that this is the place. For many years it was owned by Jacob C. Dupuy, who was a prominent citizen and supervisor of the town. He died without heirs, and the place to his friend, Martin Hau-cept the old millstone which is preserved as a relic of the past. Now it is quiet, but once it ground out flour for the surrounding neighborhood. the house built in 1753. This information was given by Dr. Edgar Krom, but I believe that the date was earlier, as a deed of prior date mentions the bounds of William DeLaMontagne, deceased. It passed into the hands of Derick Krom, who married into the DeLaMontagne family, to Nelson Krom, to Dr. Edgar Krom, and is now owned by Mrs. Josephine Lawrence. Some of the original stonework has been covered with shingles, but otherwise it is much the same as when built.

The level field between the above house and the highway was used for "general training" of the militia during the Colonial and Revolutionary Wars. Nearby was the home of Captain Schoonmaker, who had his patience severely tried while drilling the awkward country boys of whom his company was composed. One time when he failed to get his company in the desired position, he yelled Dutch: "Turn your face to my big house and your back to Stony-kill." This was not Captain Joachim Schoonmaker, one of the first settlers and a trustee of the Town. His house passed away long ago, and the location is not known further than that it was near the old cemetery. His father, Joachim, was a native of Hamburg, Germany, and came to America in the military service of the Dutch.

We must not omit the "Dorpt Huys." The exact location is described in a deed, but there is no record to show whether it was of stone or of wood. On June 5, 1705, Jan Gerretse Decker deeded to the freeholders of the Town of Rochester all that certain house and lot of ground commonly called the "Dorpt Huys," the lot being 70 yards square. Here, for half a century, all public meetings were held, and in the yard stood the stocks and whipping post, where justice was dealt out to petty offenders. By 1763, the house had passed away, as the Trustees rented the land to Jacob Schoonmaker for 12 years at a yearly rental of 7s. 6d. The lot is described as opposite the house of Jacob Schoonmaker, which seems to confirm some writers that it would place it south of the present highway. But the description is correct, as the old road to Newtown passed between Jacob Schoonmaker's and the Town lot. Later it was used as the pound, in which stray cattle were kept, and in 1846, it was deeded to District No. 2 as the site for a new school. The Hon. Alton C. Parker became one of the early principals and married a descendant of the first Joachim Schoonmaker. A tablet marks the spot.

Near the Rochester Reformed Church stands a more pretentious stone structure. A little more recent than the colonial period, but it replaced one dating well back in the preceding century. Here lived Philip DuBois Bevier, who owned a fertile farm and many slaves, so he planned a dwelling more in keeping with his station in life. Slaves and artisans were set to work preparing material for a new house, but he died in 1802 without realizing his ambition. His wife, Ann DeWitt Bevier, completed her husband's plans, and in 1805, the present building was completed. It has two stories beside a cellar and an attic, with a kitchen in the rear. Four rooms and a hall on each floor, with ten-foot ceilings. Dr. Louis D. Bevier, his son, a well known medical man of his time, lived here for half a century. On March 31, 1851, he took down his gun to shoot a rat, but the excitement caused him to drop dead in the hall from heart failure. Later it was known as the Tremper Place, and for years was occupied by the Clearwater family. It is now a part of the Charles Anderson Estate.

In Colonial days, it was customary to have scouts out watching for any threatened attack by the Indians. Silas Bouck and Philip Hine were acting in this capacity when they were surprised and captured by Indians. They were bound hand and foot, and left for three days without food or water, while the war party attacked and burned Warhouse in August 1781. As part of the same raid, a notorious Indian, by the name of Shanks Ben, was to proceed to Rochester and Newtown; but being badly burned while trying to dry gunpowder, he failed to carry out his part of the plan. On their retreat the Indians took Bouck and Hine with them to Fort Niagara; and Bouck was later confined as a prisoner at Montreal, Canada. However, he managed to escape, swam the St. Lawrence, and started for home through four hundred miles of wilderness. Near the junction of the Millbrook road with route 209, stood a Colonial tavern, the place of many early gatherings. While one of these meetings was in progress, a ragged beggar appeared in the distance. Yes, his appearance did seem familiar, and as he came nearer, they recognized their old friend, Silas Bouck, returned after 14 months captivity. Later it was used as the pound, in which stray cattle were kept, and in 1846, it was deeded to District No. 2 as the site for a new school. The Hon. Alton C. Parker became one of the early principals and married a descendant of the first Joachim Schoonmaker. A tablet marks the spot.

Near the Rochester Reformed Church stands a more pretentious stone structure. A little more recent than the colonial period, but it replaced one dating well back in the preceding century. Here lived Philip DuBois Bevier, who owned a fertile farm and many slaves, so he planned a dwelling more in keeping with his station in life. Slaves and artisans were set to work preparing material for a new house, but he died in 1802 without realizing his ambition. His wife, Ann DeWitt Bevier, completed her husband's plans, and in 1805, the present building was completed. It has two stories beside a cellar and an attic, with a kitchen in the rear. Four rooms and a hall on each floor, with ten-foot ceilings. Dr. Louis D. Bevier, his son, a well known medical man of his time, lived here for half a century. On March 31, 1851, he took down his gun to shoot a rat, but the excitement caused him to drop dead in the hall from heart failure. Later it was known as the Tremper Place, and for years was occupied by the Clearwater family. It is now a part of the Charles Anderson Estate.

In Colonial days, it was customary to have scouts out watching for any threatened attack by the Indians. Silas Bouck and Philip Hine were acting in this capacity when they were surprised and captured by Indians. They were bound hand and foot, and left for three days without food or water, while the war party attacked and burned Warhouse in August 1781. As part of the same raid, a notorious Indian, by the name of Shanks Ben, was to proceed to Rochester and Newtown; but being badly burned while trying to dry gunpowder, he failed to carry out his part of the plan. On their retreat the Indians took Bouck and Hine with them to Fort Niagara; and Bouck was later confined as a prisoner at Montreal, Canada. However, he managed to escape, swam the St. Lawrence, and started for home through four hundred miles of wilderness. Near the junction of the Millbrook road with route 209, stood a Colonial tavern, the place of many early gatherings. While one of these meetings was in progress, a ragged beggar appeared in the distance. Yes, his appearance did seem familiar, and as he came nearer, they recognized their old friend, Silas Bouck, returned after 14 months captivity. The original walls of this building are standing, although a second story and another roof have greatly changed its appearance. It is identified by a roadside marker.

Half a mile beyond, south of the road, and nearly opposite a schoolhouse, is a long rambling building of great age, said to have been built by the Hoornebeek family. Aside from dormer windows, there have been few changes in the outward appearance. It is now the property of Albert Myers. There is no date on the building, but the Hoornebeeks were very early settlers. In 1709, Anthony and Joost Hoornebeek obtained water rights from the Trustees of the Town of Rochester; and one mile west of this house built a mill and the usual stone house. A sawmill and a feed mill still exist at this place, and the old stone house is in good condition. At present it is owned by LeRoy Dunn. In a neglected plot nearby are stones with initials and dates, marking the last resting place of this family of early settlers.

Back on the concrete, and near the foot of the hill leading into Kerhonkson, is the old stone house occupied for many years by "Bully Chipp" and his son "Manny," who lived alone and worked their farm. Few people knew them by any other name, but I believe that rightly they should have been called Joseph and Henry.

The stone work, and a wood, in addition, both seem very old, but I am unable to learn the date of the building. However, there is good reason to believe that it was built by a member of the VanLeuven family, as that was Mrs. Chipp's family name, and the place came from her father. It is now owned by Oscar Green, and is the last house in the Town on 209.

We shall now consider some of the old stone houses in the vicinity of Whitfield, known as Newtown in Colonial days. About one mile north of Accord is Canyon Lake Farms, settled by the Westbrooks. Jonathan Westbrook was an officer in the army of Oliver Cromwell, and came to this country about 1660, and later settled in the Town of Rochester. We believe this to be the spot, as in 1706, his son, Derick Westbrook, asked for a grant "in addition to that which he already owned." At the falls on the stream, he built a mill and a fine stone house which has been modernized, and as it is today, surrounded by fine old trees, presents a very pleasing picture. The old Mill has entirely passed away, except the old millstone which is preserved as a relic of the past.

Now it is quiet, but once it ground out flour for the surrounding neighborhood. Roads were poor and travel difficult, so many times a youngster was sent to the mill with a bag of grain over the horses back. Wessel Broadhead Westbrook was a grandson, commonly known as "Broady Westbrook," who lived here for many years. It passed into the hands of Tuntis H. Duryea and thence to James Lounsbury, who married his daughter. The present owners are the Marshall family.

About one mile farther north at Whitfield, is the residence of Lincoln Dunn. This is another very old stone house, originally having been the home of David Hoornebeek. The steep sloping roof has been extended so as to form a porch on one side and one end, which constitutes the only exterior change. The inside arrangement is the same, but black walnut finishings have taken the place of the original pine.

A few hundred yards north, on the same side of the road, is the Dupuy place. Records show that in 1730, Ephraim Dupuy built a house about two miles north of Rochester, and we have good reason to believe that this is the place. For many years it was owned by Jacob C. Dupuy, who was a prominent citizen and supervisor of the town. He died without heirs, and the place to his friend, Martin Hau-

cept the old millstone which is preserved as a relic of the past. Now it is quiet, but once it ground out flour for the surrounding neighborhood. the house built in 1753. This information was given by Dr. Edgar Krom, but I believe that the date was earlier, as a deed of prior date mentions the bounds of William DeLaMontagne, deceased. It passed into the hands of Derick Krom, who married into the DeLaMontagne family, to Nelson Krom, to Dr. Edgar Krom, and is now owned by Mrs. Josephine Lawrence. Some of the original stonework has been covered with shingles, but otherwise it is much the same as when built.

The level field between the above house and the highway was used for "general training" of the militia during the Colonial and Revolutionary Wars. Nearby was the home of Captain Schoonmaker, who had his patience severely tried while drilling the awkward country boys of whom his company was composed. One time when he failed to get his company in the desired position, he yelled Dutch: "Turn your face to my big house and your back to Stony-kill." This was not Captain Joachim Schoonmaker, one of the first settlers and a trustee of the Town. His house passed away long ago, and the location is not known further than that it was near the old cemetery. His father, Joachim, was a native of Hamburg, Germany, and came to America in the military service of the Dutch.

We must not omit the "Dorpt Huys." The exact location is described in a deed, but there is no record to show whether it was of stone or of wood. On June 5, 1705, Jan Gerretse Decker deeded to the freeholders of the Town of Rochester all that certain house and lot of ground commonly called the "Dorpt Huys," the lot being 70 yards square. Here, for half a century, all public meetings were held, and in the yard stood the stocks and whipping post, where justice was dealt out to petty offenders. By 1763, the house had passed away, as the Trustees rented the land to Jacob Schoonmaker for 12 years at a yearly rental of 7s. 6d. The lot is described as opposite the house of Jacob Schoonmaker, which seems to confirm some writers that it would place it south of the present highway. But the description is correct, as the old road to Newtown passed between Jacob Schoonmaker's and the Town lot. Later it was used as the pound, in which stray cattle were kept, and in 1846, it was deeded to District No. 2 as the site for a new school. The Hon. Alton C. ## Local Elks' Club Opens Activities

Kingston Lodge, B. P. O. Elks, opened activities of the year Thursday evening with 100 members in attendance. Featuring the program was an erudite and scholarly address by Attorney Andrew J. Cook, one of Ulster county's outstanding lawyers.

Mr. Cook spoke on the Constitution of the United States, pointing out that his subject was appropriate since this year marks the 150th anniversary of its ratification by the State of New York. He sketched the historical background of the document, the struggle for independence followed by a period of chaotic disillusionment during which the states were only loosely knit together and ineffectually sought to maintain order, levy taxes and exercise governmental functions.

The speaker dwelt on many of the intimate happenings of the secret convention itself, which were only brought to light years later by the findings of the transcribed notes of James Madison. Mr. Cook emphasized the importance of the unique judiciary article of the constitution which provided for courts free from executive and legislative interference. He concluded with praise of the supreme court which he characterized as a bulwark for the protection of the people.

Many past exalted rulers attended and Exalted Ruler John M. Casin called on the following for a few words: Past Exalted Rulers Hill, Merritt, Cashin, Burr, Hilley, Beck, Millen, Niles, Ryan, Loxan, Rosenber, Edwards, Disch, Lipkin and Edelmutt.

Past Exalted Ruler John Edwards and his committee arranged the speaking and social programs which were followed by refreshments, in part donated by District Deputy Charles Ryan.

It was announced that efforts were being made to secure a speaker of statewide prominence for the meeting of October 27.

All the average man wants today is a fairly easy job, a new automobile, a beautiful wife—and a set of creditors who will listen to reason.

Speed is not purely a matter of railroad trains and automobiles. Sailor—Good morning, parson. I haven't seen you lately.

Minister—No, captain, I've been busy. Only this morning I married three couples in fifteen minutes.

Father says if mother does not quit her back-seat driving he is going to get her a job steering a hook and ladder.

Many of the cows that frequent our highways do from bang's disease. . . . Caused by automobiles banging into them.

Wife—How'd you get that smudge on your face?

Husband—Well, honey, the car broke down and I had to fix it.

Wife—Since when do you grease your car with red grease?

A dashing young fellow named Tim Drove his car with considerable vim.

Said he: "I'm renowned for covering ground."

But, alas, the ground now covers him.

Safety on the streets and highways is a growing problem. The way to solve it is through rigid regulation and training youth in the ways of safety.

Negro (on bus)—I want to be procrustinated at the next corner.

Driver—You want to be what?

Negro—Don't lose your temper. I had to look in the dictionary myself before I found that "procrustinate" means "put off."

A woman tells this one: "When shopping this morning I called at a grocery for vegetables. A boy just about 14 came to serve. I asked him for one pound of Spanish onions. With a look of surprise, he said: 'Ain't got any, lady; they ain't got time to dig 'em up. Don't you know there is a fight on in Spain?'"

It seems to us that Mabel needs a "steady."

Jim—What did Mabel say after you kissed her?

Norman—She told me to call on Friday night, because that was amateur night.

It was the dentist's busy day: "I am sorry," said the dentist, "but you cannot have an appointment with me this afternoon. I have eighteen cavities to fill." And he picked up his golf-bag and went out.

Diner—What's that, waiter? Steak all gone?

Waiter—Yes, sir. I'm sorry, sir.

Diner—Bring me some chops.

Waiter—Sorry, sir. Chops all gone, too.

Diner—Then I'll have beef stew.

Waiter—Beef stew's all gone, too, sir.

Diner—What a restaurant! Gimme my hat!

Waiter—Heh! Heh! That's gone, too!

Theatre Group To Present Play

The Ulster County Theatre Association will present "You and I," a comedy by Philip Barry, in December. It was announced today. The group decided to present the play at a meeting held last evening in the Byrne Hall on Broadway.

The play, which was approved unanimously by the membership, will be its first presentation since last winter. It was suggested by Miss Marion Byrne and Rabin Herbert Bloom, members of the literary committee. A director will be named within the next two weeks and casting will begin then.

William Sheinman was named president at the meeting and the following other officers were elected: William Fitch, vice president; Robert Flynn, recording secretary; Mario Lyons, executive secretary; and Arthur B. Ewig, treasurer.

A British soldier and a Canadian watched an officer walking past, wearing, as the first ribbon of several on his tunic, that of the Order of the British Empire.

Soldier (to the Canadian)—Oo be e?

Canadian—Yep. O. B. E.

Soldier (enlightened)—Oh, he's!

Post Raps Work Of State Delegates

Addressing a meeting of the American Labor Party at Pythian Hall, 674 Broadway, last night, Langdon W. Post, labor party candidate for comptroller, charged that "The work of the Constitutional Convention should be censured by the voters, because the delegates to the convention failed conspicuously to make any contribution to the cause of good government."

"Reactionary political forces were in the saddle," said Post. "Under Republican leadership a vicious partisan reapportionment plan was adopted. Democratic delegates aided and abetted in adopting the disgraceful ban on proportional representation. Behind the scenes trading resulted in the defeat of one of the most important proposals at the convention—amendment preserving the power rights of the St. Lawrence and Niagara rivers for the people of the state."

Going further, Post declared, "The American Labor Party considers the results of the convention to be one of the outstanding issues of the campaign."

In his address, Joseph V. O'Leary, the party's candidate for attorney general, said, "Both the Republicans and the Democrats dismiss unemployment with the promise that they shall continue relief and express some vague promises to do what they can to get private enterprise to absorb the unemployed."

"As far as the Democratic party is concerned, its failure to endorse the national administration's efforts to put people to work through public works is almost a betrayal of their endorsement of that national administration."

"The American Labor Party, says that where private enterprise has failed to create regular employment, the government should do so through a regular systematized public works program."

Chris J. Flanagan, endorsed by the county committee of the Labor Party for surrogate, and Jacob Schneider, candidate for Member of Assembly, were other speakers.

Big Freeze Declared Due in 71,799 Years

MIAMI—After two years of research, Professor Hirsch Yankelwitz, formerly of the Institute of Technology of St. Petersburg university, declares that the earth will freeze into a solid ball in 71,799 years.

It's all question of determining when the volcanic fires, which give life and vegetation, will burn out, he declares. He reaches his figure by comparing the dimensions of the earth, Mars and the moon, freezing three spheres of relative size, letting them form a coating of ice and then measuring the amount of moisture.

The fact that the Kingston Daily Freeman is a favorite among Kingston children is the result of a definite policy to edit The Freeman with their welfare in mind. Stories, comics and articles by nationally known writers not only bring amusement, but provide additional information which is often a valuable supplement to their school work. ## Rochester Fiscal Affairs Criticized Albany, Oct. 15 (Special).—Criticism of irregularities in the conduct of fiscal affairs of the town of Rochester, Ulster county, during the period from January 1, 1936, to September 30, 1937, is contained in the latest report of examination of the town's finances by members of the staff of State Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine.

A summary of the report has been prepared by the bureau of municipal accounts, and copies have been forwarded to local officials. The summary contains the following:

"An examination of the records relating to official oaths disclosed the fact that certain officials appointed by the town board had not filed an oath of office as required by Section 26 of the Town Law. The record relating to official undertakings was likewise examined and several errors in execution and otherwise, were pointed out by the examiners.

"The supervisor did not publish an annual financial statement as required by Section 29 of the Town Law. The dockets of the justices of the peace were examined and some errors in relation to disposition of fines noted.

"An error in relation to the appropriation for item 4 of the Highway Fund was noted and the examiners suggested that the next tax levy be reduced to the extent of the surplus previously erroneously raised.

"Attention was called to the fact that Section 122 of the Town Law relating to the manner in which claims should be paid has not been followed.

"It appears to have been the practice of the town clerk to draw warrants for only such claims as appeared on the abstracts, whereas all claims paid by the supervisor should be predicated on the warrant of the town clerk. Several claims were found which did not have proper itemization but contained sub-vouchers in support thereof. This criticism related also to services rendered by the supervisor whose claims had been paid without a clear indication on the face thereof as to the nature of the services. Several illustrations of the foregoing oversights were noted in the report.

"An examination of the claims of the supervisor for a percentage of the disbursements showed that a percentage had been allowed for transferring funds for which a percentage cannot be legally allowed.

"Claims of the town clerk for a previous period were examined and several illegal payments for alleged services had been made, among which may be mentioned a charge for reporting the issuance of licenses whereas the compensation for this service is presumed to be paid by the licensee. One of the justices of the peace had submitted erroneous charges for the conduct of criminal cases and the examiners point out the provisions of Section 740-A of the code of criminal procedure as being controlling.

"The provisions of Section 164 of the town law relating to an interest in claims of town officers had been violated. This provides in substance that no claims shall be audited and allowed in which a town officer has an interest other than that arising out of his duties as a town official.

"A large number of claims were filed by assessors for meetings at Kingston with the State question as to whether such claims are within the provisions of Section 171-D of the Tax Law; if so, they should have been paid by the county. The assessors also submitted a claim for 'holding the assessment roll.' There is no statute which authorizes this charge.

"One of the constables had been allowed a mileage rate of 15 cents per mile whereas the rate has been reduced from 15 cents to eight cents per mile by statute. Inspectors of election had filed several illegal claims and Section 19 of the Election Law is cited by the examiners in this connection. It is also noted that a so-called 'police officer' had been paid for services rendered at polls whereas inspectors of election are presumed to maintain order at the polls.

"The Welfare Officer had been allowed a mileage rate of eight cents per mile for travel whereas Section 162 of the town law relating to expenses for travel provides a rate of not to exceed six cents per mile.

County Court Meets Monday

An adjourned session of the September term of county court will be convened Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the court house by County Judge Frederick G. Traver. At that time District Attorney Cleon B. Murray will take up the criminal calendar. It is anticipated that civil matters may be again taken up at the conclusion of criminal work if there remains time.

The grand jury which has been in session has not yet completed its work and reported to the court. The final report will be held open until near the end of the term so as to clear up as many cases as possible before the grand jurors are discharged.

Bank Deposits Gain
Deposits in the mutual savings banks of the State of New York showed a substantial gain for the quarter ending September 30, according to figures released today by the Savings Banks Association. The total amount due depositors at the end of the quarter was $5,361,794,841 and represented a three months' gain of $25,473,435. The increase for the six months' period ending September 30 was $22,348,431, while for the year ending the same date the gain was $70,532,700.

Corsi For U. S. Senate

EDWARD CORSI

New York, Oct. 15.—Edward Corsi, Republican candidate for the United States Senate, short term, is deputy commissioner of welfare of New York city.

He is a liberal and has been associated all of his mature life with liberal and humanitarian activities. He was born in Italy, accompanied his father in exile to Switzerland at the age of 7, but returned to Italy soon after, upon his father's election to the Italian parliament.

Upon coming to this country he was educated at the Clason Point Military Academy in Westchester, St. Francis Xavier College in New York city, and at Fordham University, where he received his degree in law in 1922.

He was an editorial writer for various newspapers and magazines, and was a correspondent in Mexico with the Outlook in 1923 and 1924, and in Italy for the New York World in 1928. From 1928-1931 he was a director of Harlem House, and was supervisor of the federal census in Manhattan in 1930. He was United States immigration commissioner at Ellis Island 1933 and 1934. He was appointed to this federal office by President Hoover and was reappointed by President Roosevelt, the youngest man to hold this office.

He was director of the Home Relief Bureau of New York city in 1931 and 1932, supervising an expenditure of $200,000 for the care of 200,000 New York families.

He was a delegate-at-large to the New York state constitutional convention, and chairman of the committee on social welfare. He gained very wide attention in this state and elsewhere for his work in connection with the proposed amendment to establish, with state aid, an integrated unemployment, health and old age insurance system, designed to reduce to a minimum the need for home relief.

He is the author of "In the Shadow of Liberty," MacMillan, New York, 1934.

Nurses Hold Final Conferences Today

The time has passed when a nurse could get her training in a few months or even one or two years and when nursing service meant only giving bed baths, taking temperatures and the performance of similar minor duties. The registered graduate or the institutional nurse of today is trained to be the physician's right hand, and upon the completion of her educational course of training is equipped to carry out the physician's directions in all scientific procedures. Her educational preparation, both general and professional has been sound, the latter having been enriched by the sciences basic to the nursing arts especially the social, biological and physical.

"The institutional nurse must be grounded, not only in scientific principles, but she should also be technically skilled in nursing procedures so that she may be able to guide when necessary and to help student nurses with critically ill or difficult patients. New procedures and equipment must be familiar to her and she should be able to demonstrate them with deftness and finish.

"Recent studies indicate that most hospitals are now employing graduate, registered nurses in much larger numbers and are finding that a well selected, relatively permanent staff of graduate nurses not only helps to assure the most stable and satisfactory nursing but makes possible a better program of education for student nurses. For such service to be satisfactory for both hospital and nurse it is essential that every opportunity be given for the continued growth of the staff of which the institutional nurse is a member. The nurses of such a staff should be able to keep in touch with the newest developments in medicine and nursing practice.

"The National League of Nursing Education has exercised great influence in creating and supporting policies and programs which have raised the standards of nursing schools, promoted graduate courses and improved the nursing service in the hospital. The nurse who recognizes this great contribution to her profession will sense her obligation as a member to keep on studying and thus contribute to the advancement of her own growth.

"The education of the nurse does not stop when she has completed her initial preparation. It is to grow she must continue to be a student and a learner. There are many opportunities for her to grow through the educational experience of the hospital and the nursing school, professional associations, professional literature, organized courses of study and the experience of the position itself. The nurse should learn to use intelligently the resources of current literature dealing with the various fields of nursing and other means which will help in continued growth and successful adjustment. She should become acquainted with the nature and purposes of professional nursing organizations, their growth and accomplishments. One of the best means for professional growth of the nurse in service is active membership in professional organizations, national, state and local. There are opportunities to

Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coates

HOLLYWOOD — Everybody knows you can't keep a good Barrymore down, but the transformation of John, the youngest, strikes me as the most amazing coup in that amazing family.

Just a few years ago John, the big romantic star, was a particular favorite of mine as even Claude Rains, who had an entire set for "Fovarich" rebuilt rather than make an entrance showing the "wrong" side of his face. Don't know that John ever had set; rebuilt, but he was plenty demanding, living up to his professional status as a "great lover."

Barrymore went into a skid when the war made great-lover rather ridiculous for him, but he has skidded up again—by turning on the comedy at which he was always best, and by throwing his profile out the window. To realize how far he's thrown it, see "Hold That Cord" and then see—or remember—the John of such lyrically lovely-dancy silent pieces as "Eternal Love," "The Beloved Rogue" and "Don Juan!"

CORRIGAN'S in the right place. Making a movie based on his life, Hollywood has been shooting pictures backwards for years—and its critics still say it does things the wrong way. . . . Reminds me, there was a movie once that actually did go the wrong way. . . . Started at the end, with the hero's funeral, and went back from there. . . . Fine picture, too. "The Power and the Glory," and Spencer Tracy was every bit the actor he is today, but it didn't make a penny's worth at the pay-windows.

Bert Leeds — he's Herbert L. Leeds in the screen credits — is one boy who knew what he wanted and went after it. A cutter at Warner's for five years, he fired off proposals of a directing job and switched lots. . . . Twentieth gave him a "Jones Family" to do, and after that "Island in the Sky," "Jane Wither's" "Keep Smiling," then the Cuntuplet feature, and now "Arizona Wildcat," again with Jane — all in less than a year.

WONDER what was in Nancy Carroll's thoughts the other eve. . . . Saw her leaving a preview, in which she'd done a minor role, and she walked alone through the autographic lanes—with NO takers. All the kids were waiting for the exit of Virginia Bruce, the STAR, who was just a little stock girl at Paramount when Nancy was a movie queen. . . . I don't know what Nancy was thinking, but I do know that she held her head up and smiled while she thought it, and it seemed to me that a girl who can do that has licked Hollywood.

Rats

They're Coming Back,
A Curl At A Time

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer
Remember grandmother's hair rats?
We aren't wearing rats—yet.
But we seem to be going in for their first cousin, hair pieces.
Upswept coiffures started the scoury for extra clusters of hair.
Among the types finding favor are:

OVALS
They're really bands of curls about ten inches long and four wide. You brush your hair to the top of your head, then attach the curls at the most becoming angle.

BANDEAUX
This is really the oval, only it's fastened to the bottom instead of the top of the coiffure. It also may be worn across the top and down in back.

BRAIDS
You can plait your own hair or buy a braid to match it. Designed to hold upswung hair in place, the store braid has hooks at either end to fasten to your doll's hat.

CLUSTERS
Fastened to combs, these curls not only hold your hair up but also add softness to the contour of your coiffure. They come in singles and doubles as well as clusters.

Turtle Talk
In America the names turtle, tortoise and terrapin are used interchangeably. In England, however, tortoise is considered the correct name for the land species. Terrapin for the freshwateredible kinds. And turtle is employed only for sea-dwelling ones. Incidentally, turtles suffer from parasites, such as ticks, for instance.

Chemical Caspers
No chemist has yet succeeded in making something that will strain out the salt from sea water by simple means. Yet the cocoanut palm does it. Its roots are usually in the sea water of a lagoon.
Yet the sap in the fruit is sweet water free from salt.

Here Are 7 Good Ways To Serve Oysters

By MRS. ALEXANDER R.
GEORGE

AP Feature Service Writer
Oysters are back. To many of us that's as thrilling as harvest-time or the opening of the football season.

Every oyster-growing section of the country boasts of the superior delicacy of the local product. But regardless of origin, individual flavor or size, oysters can be prepared and served by the same general methods.

How will we have our oysters?
Well, let's start with the cocktail.
Use your favorite variety and see that they are fresh, well chilled and topped up by the right sauce.
Serve about six to the portion and always include a wedge of lemon for each service. Serve the oysters on the half-shell or in small glass cups lined with crepe or shredded lettuce.

Here's a recipe for a universal cocktail sauce. Mix half a cup of catsup, a third of a cup of chili sauce, two tablespoons of grated horseradish, a fourth of a teaspoon of salt and an eighth of a teaspoon each of paprika, celery salt and granulated sugar. Mix and chill. This is enough for six or seven servings. If you're extra fond of seasoning, top the oysters with a little chopped, crisp bacon, minced parsley and pimientos.

Perhaps you'd like to launch your luncheon or dinner with something hot. Oyster blaque is just the ticket. Chop oysters and heat them in melted butter, then add to savory cream soup sauce.
Serve in cups or plates and garnish with whipped cream and paprika. For a change include some corn or mushrooms with the oysters.

Oyster kabobs are just the thing to serve for an informal supper.
Alternate eight oysters with skewers of bacon on long skewers.
Broil or bake until browned, season with a mixture of salt, pepper, celery salt, chopped parsley and chili sauce, and serve on hot buttered toast.

Creamed with peas, mushrooms, hard cooked eggs, chicken or ham, oysters make a one-dish meal well worth considering. Mix equal portions of oysters with one of the foods mentioned and add to a

In this dish two patrician foods, oysters and mushrooms, are blended for a rich luncheon, or dinner.

thick, cream sauce, well seasoned.
Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in casserole in moderate oven for fifteen minutes. Over-cooking may toughen the oysters.

Did you ever think of adding horseradish to cream or Hollan-daise sauce when you serve it with fried oysters? A grand idea. Use three tablespoons of horseradish with each cup of sauce. And have you tried adding chopped pickled beets to tartar sauce served with fried or broiled oysters? It's a very tasty addition.

Oysters Creole are a triumph in the art of seasoning. Brown three tablespoons each of chopped onions, celery and green peppers in four tablespoons butter. Add one and a half cups of chopped oysters and simmer five minutes.

Then add three tablespoons of catsup, two of chili sauce and a fourth of a teaspoon each of salt and paprika. Thoroughly heat the ingredients, then serve them, topped with browned mushrooms,
on hot toast.

There's one other way of serving oysters you should keep in mind. If you add them to stuffing for fowl your stuffings will step out in the lead. Add one cup small oysters to each four cups of savory stuffing or wild rice.
That's rich eating.

Broiled Oysters With Mushrooms
1 pint Bluepoint oysters, drained, 24 medium mushroom caps, peeled, melted butter, salt, pepper.

Season oysters with salt and pepper. Brush mushroom caps, inside and out, with butter and season with salt and pepper. Cook mushrooms under broiler about five minutes or until browned;
then turn and cook about five minutes, or until done. Cook oysters under broiler about two minutes, or until edges begin to curl. Place one oyster in each cap; serve at once on hot buttered toast.

One Too Many Cocktails And You Spoil The Soup

By JOAN DURHAM

AP Feature Service Writer
A good cocktail doesn't ruin a good dinner.
That is, if you hold it to one and if you don't eat too many things with it, says Richardson
Wright, president of New York's Wine and Food Society.

"I notice," he adds with a sly smile, "that when I serve cocktails and sherry before my dinner parties the so-called gourmets present always take the cocktail."

Helps For Serving
This connoisseur offers these helps about drinks and their serving:

With soup, Madeira wine or sherry. Unless you have "great" (exceptional vintage) sherry you should chill it a little. "Great" sherry may be served at room temperature.

With fish, a white wine.
Wright's favorites are dry grave, chablis, or meursault (white burgundy).

Claret and burgundy are wines for meat and game. If you serve both have the claret first, because it's lighter.

Sauterne is a good dessert wine
—as are other sweet wines. Port may be poured over stewed pears,
Kirsch over vanilla ice cream.

After dinner serve a fine old rum with the coffee for men.
Women prefer a sweet liqueur, like cointreau. Mr. Wright's after-dinner favorites are: Cognac, calvados and armagnac.

Never Over Half Full
Never fill a wine glass more than half full, says Mr. Wright, and serve most wines in tulip-shaped glasses "so the flavor can't get out." Sherry, however, is properly served in vee-shaped glasses.

Madiera, spirits and liqueurs should be stored with the bottles standing up. Most wines are stored with the bottles on their sides.

If you take wine at home as a food, serve half a glass of red or white wine and half water.

Unless you live in a cold, damp house or unless your party is very dull you won't need to serve scotch and soda after the meal, says Mr. Wright.

Never bring out whiskey in its bottle, he advises. Serve it from decanters. "But if you have a very fine bottle you want to show off," Mr. Wright allows an exception. ("The liquor companies have tried to make us label-conscious. That's why so many people think it's smart to bring out their bottles," Mr. Wright explains. "I wouldn't think of it.")

Last—but not least: Stick to the fruit of the vine or the fruit of the grain. You'll be sorry if you mix them.

To clean washable gloves, put them on your hands and wash them in warm water and mild soap suds. Rub the soiled spots gently with a complexion brush.
This will loosen the dirt but not injure the fabric. Remove gloves and rinse well in quantities of clear water the same temperature as that used for the washing.
Hang up dripping to dry. When partially dry blow in them to pre-

Designers Give Clubwomen A Place In The Fashion Sun

By ADELAIDE KERR

AP Fashion Editor

Clubwomen's clothes, including new smart "speech dresses," have stepped before fashion's footlights this fall.

National Business Women's Week, scheduled for October 9 to 15, has given new impetus to a trend to produce distinctive clothes for the woman who is frankly forty. Since the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, which sponsors the week, has 68,000 members in 48 states, the fashion world has marshaled its forces for a widespread presentation of frocks suitable for day and evening meetings and teas.

Designs Are Modern

If you are scheduled for a speech before a club or committee, the answer to your dress problem should be found in one of the many frocks designed to make a smart appearance on the platform. They are made of plain mossy and cloque crepes and light weight wools in black and the season's new colors — wine, plum, purple, gray-blue and blue-green.

In design they have broken away from the old surplice bodice line which used to be a woman's destiny as soon as she passed 40.
A number are fashioned with shoulder-line shirtings and waistline tuckings which soften the bust line and flatten the diaphragm. Some are smartened with embroidered accents or a banding of soft contrasting colors such as raspberry wine and grayed blue or black, but scores are untrimmed so that their appearances may be varied with costume jewel accessories. For these a good necklace or clip are smart.

Tips On Color

Since color is a ticklish problem for the woman over 40, before you buy consider these tips given by Laurene Hempstead, former lecturer on costume design, in her new book, "Look Your Best":

Generally becoming colors are dark or softened hues such as grayed blue, dark green, deep blue-green, dark red and violet red.

The woman whose hair is turning gray, so that it presents a pepper and salt appearance, should avoid browns and tans, fabrics such as black and white mixtures which emphasize the variety of colors in her hair and hues which make her hair assume a greenish cast. Dark red, dark blue-green, and (if her skin is not yellow)

This platform frock for the club woman is designed of soft blue-green light weight wool and finished with a belt clashed by gold disks. Notice the shoulder shirtings and diaphragm tucks which release soft fullness in the bodice.
The black felt hat is trimmed with a blue-green feather.
(Costume assembled by R. H. Macy & Co.)

violet, blue-violet and blue should be becoming.

The woman whose hair is definitely gray has less difficulty in choosing colors, since her hair has lost the greenish cast of the transitional stage and is likely to have a bluish gray cast. Grayed warm colors such as red and red-violet usually will be becoming. Violet, blue-violet, blue, blue-green and green, preferably in soft grayed tones, will be good if she has cool eyes and skin. Grays should be darker than the hair and of a slightly bluish cast. Tans and browns should be avoided. The older woman who wishes to wear black should combine it with a color accent.

Modes Of The Moment By Adelaide Kerr Bracelets Of Glass Medallions Bedeck A Two-Purpose Frock

Stained glass medallions, stamped with motifs inspired by old cathedral windows are linked to make something new in bracelets. They are worn with a frock of green, red and white clan plaid, designed to answer the business girl's need for a frock that can go to the office, then on to a football game for country week-end. The green felt hat, by Howard Hodge, is stitched in red and white to match the frock.

Place in a paper sack and add six doughnuts at a time. Shake the bag until doughnuts are coated.
These are delicious served with hot or cold cider.

To clean the painted wall behind the refrigerator or stove tightly attach a soft cloth to a yardstick, broom handle or fishing pole, dip it in warm water and soap suds and poke about at will.

To clean linoleum under refrigerators or stoves, dip the cloth in floor wax. This polishes as it cleans.

A crispy coat of canned fruit is made by dipping the fruit into your coat. Heat cornmeal in a shallow pan and, with the fingers, rub the meal well into the fur.

After two days, shake out or brush lightly with a soft brush.

If the fur is very soiled, repeat,

Hot spiced cranberry juice and winter luncheons and dinners.

This is very effective on the white fur, so often used on evening wraps.

Dressing For Endive
Here is a dressing to serve with endive. Mix two tablespoons of current jelly with one-third of a cup of salad dressing or mayonnaise and add two tablespoons of heavy cream, whipped. Arrange the endive on sliced oranges and pass the dressing.

Hungary Calls Out Five Classes Today 'Preserve' Peace

By The Associated Press
Hungary having broken minor negotiations with Czechoslovakia, today mobilized 300,000 men as Germany emerged in the role of mediator in Central Europe's knotty nationalities.

Hungary called five classes to arms for what officials said was peace, not war. They declared the collapse of negotiations Budapest's demands for Manchu-populated lands of Czechoslovakia and "continued mobilization of the Czechoslovak army," the official press declared Hungary had "powerful friends"—a reference to Italy and Germany, whose heads two Hungarian officers conferred yesterday.

Although a Hungarian appeal was sent to the four Munich powers to mediate the dispute, Reichsmann was regarded as having been made mediator without the need of help from Britain, France or Italy, the press members of the Munich accord.

Each source said the principal aim of the fuhrer's talk yesterday with Kolman Daranyi, former Hungarian premier, and Frantisek Chvalkovsky, Czechoslovak foreign minister, was Hitler's assurance that Hungary would get legitimate share of dismembered Czechoslovakia.

Political circles expressed belief Hitler told Chvalkovsky in unmistakable language that he intended to settle the dispute quickly, Czechoslovakia, however, seemed to move troops closer to frontier with Hungary on the Danube river and a Czech officer shared an attempt to occupy Czechoslovak territory would be met under any circumstances.

In Britain, meanwhile, nationalistic circles of all Britons to give British government an ultimatum for evacuation of Czech soldiers from any zones ceded by Prague. He referred to reports that some Czech army commanders in border sections had declared they would disobey any Prague order to evacuate certain disputed areas.

Kalman Hubay, Hungarian Nazi leader, demanded today that Premier Imredy's cabinet resign immediately because Imredy was "unable to lead at such a serious moment."

In an editorial in the newspaper Magyarars, Hubay predicted that Hungary soon would have another cabinet, including former Premier Koloman Daranyi, who conferred yesterday with Adolf Hitler, on a National Socialist basis.

Another Nazi leader said Imredy had broken off territorial negotiations with Czechoslovakia against Hitler's wishes and also ordered mobilization against Germany's advice.

Magyar-inhabited slices of her already-dismembered neighbor. "We have powerful friends, who fully support us," said the Premier Lloyd.

The reference was perhaps to Germany and Italy, with whose leaders two Hungarian envoys conferred yesterday. Mobilization was reported to have been postponed once previously at the request of "great foreign powers," especially Germany.

The call to the colors was decided upon in a cabinet meeting last night and was formally decreed by the war ministry today. Men of the classes of 1908 and 1911 (men 30 and 37 years old) were ordered to report for duty by 8 p. m., Monday. Other classes included in the order were not immediately specified.

Various Exemptions
The order exempts employees of railways, shipping and transportation companies, a mobilization of drivers, post office and telegraph employees, police and other civil service employees required in the normal state and municipal functions.

Simultaneously it was said Hungary had no aggressive plans and that a strong army was necessary to secure peace along the frontier in territories Hungary expects to get from Czechoslovakia with the help of Italy, Germany, France and Britain, whose diplomats reached an agreement in Munich granting Adolf Hitler's demands for Sudetenland.

An appeal was sent to the four powers to mediate the dispute. Pester Lloyd said the present Hungarian demands included: A decision of the four powers that all Czech territory in which the 1910 census showed a Hungarian population of more than 50 per cent should be returned immediately to Hungary.

After the return of those sections Hungary would guarantee the new Czechoslovak borders only if plebiscites are conducted among all border minorities.

A government map showing the extent of the Hungarian claims included the cities of Bratislava, Nitra, Leve, Kassa, Ungvar and Munkacs.

One government official said, on the contrary, that it might be difficult to evacuate Czech soldiers from any zones ceded by Prague. He referred to reports that some Czech army commanders in border sections had declared they would disobey any Prague order to evacuate certain disputed areas.

Business News Continues Good

Stocks on the New York Stock Exchange opened Friday with an advance over Thursday's closing averages, but sold off in later trading and closed with industrial and rails showing losses for the day, utilities however going ahead as they reflected continued indications that the industry was due for more considerable treatment at the hands of the administration. Industrial issues registered a loss for the day of 1.01 points, to 151.45 in the Dow Jones averages and rails lost 0.27, down to 31.13. The utility averages were up 0.33 point, to 23.50. Government bonds were strong, but corporate issues were lower. Spot hides were up a quarter of a cent a pound and there was an increase in leather by the American Hide & Leather Co. Copper advanced another quarter of a cent, to 1 1/2 cents a pound.

Meanwhile business news continued good, with Barron's index of business activity for the week ended October 8, making a new high for the year, standing at 65.2 per cent of normal, as against 62.3 per cent the preceding week. Freight car loadings totaled 702,964, an increase of 5,026 over the previous week.

Auto production jumped sharply, total for the week being 50,440 units as against 37,655 the week before. Prospects are that production for October will mark a peak for the year, barring of course the development of labor trouble. Output for the month, in the United States and Canada, should surpass 200,000, but will be well below the total for October last year, when 338,000 units were turned out.

Steel operations at Youngstown continue at a comparatively high level, closing the week at 55 per cent of capacity and due to reach a new high for the year of 57 per cent next week.

The combined operating revenues of 87 Class 1 railroads, in September, are estimated at $257,895,888, a decrease of over 11 per cent from the $290,178,368 reported in the same month last year. New York Central's deficit for September is expected to be around the August deficit of $78,643.

United Light & Power reports net profit of $1,077,633 for the 12 months ended August 31, equal to 14 cents a common share, vs. $5,193,506 or 46 cents a share in 1937.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP)—Select industrial and utilities hit the high spots in today's market on a fast rallying swing that landed numerous issues in new territory for the past year.

Business optimism, partly in connection with recent expectations of huge government spending for armaments, together with additional signs of greater cooperation between the power companies and the government, helped to bring in fresh buying brokers said.

Particular strength was exhibited by aircraft, which stand to profit extensively if the national defense program comes to fruition. Copper, pushed along as mounting prices for this metal were forecast. Several specialties were hard to acquire. Gains ran to 2 or more points at the best, but profit selling near the close reduced or cancelled extreme recoveries.

While the opening was a trifling mixed bidding soon got under way at a speedy clip and, during the initial hour, the ticker tape was behind as much as two minutes with the turnover in this period amounting to $30,000 shares. For the brief session transfers approximated 1,200,000 shares.

Steel had their moment in the limelight as mill operations next week were thought likely to register another upturn.

Motors also held to a slim groove, fears of future labor troubles interrupting expanding output and digging into net earnings acting as a brake on this department.

Rails generally were a shade under water throughout, despite satisfactory freight traffic increases. The wage controversy was still a cloud over the carriers.

Conspicuous on the advance were Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Sperry, Glenn Martin, United Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, Public Service, N. J., Anaconda, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Philip Morris and Dow Chemical.

Bonds were selectively higher. Commodities shuffled over a narrowly irregular route.

Voters Turn Down Capt. Smith Gives Narcotics Talk

At the Friday afternoon session of the State Nurses Association Institute, at the Governor's Hotel, Captain Frank J. Smith of the Bureau of Narcotics, Director of the State Department of Health explained the provisions of the state law against narcotics and also made reference to the federal law on the subject.

He said that compliance with the stringent provisions of the law in this state almost always meant that the federal law would also be met, with the exception of the federal tax.

Captain Smith told of numerous cases of non-compliance with the law, some intentional, but not intentional. He found that there was still ground for improvement in the system of handling such drugs in some institutions.

It was emphasized that narcotic drugs must not be prescribed except by a physician, dentist or veterinarian. All such prescriptions or orders must be signed by one of these qualified professional men; nurses have no authority to prescribe these drugs and telephone orders for narcotics have no standing whatever under the law.

The speaker said that from the time narcotic drugs are received in a hospital, until they are properly administered, there should be a continuous record, under signature of those handling them. There is particular necessity for such procedure because of numerous thefts of drugs from institutions by people connected with them in some way, either directly or indirectly. He added that in case of thefts they should be reported at once to the State Bureau of Narcotics, or to some person who would forward the information to the State Bureau.

Captain Smith said that nurses on outside duty had no right to have supplies of narcotic drugs in their possession, as there were possible penalties of one year imprisonment and a fine of $500.

Preview of Windham Film
The Friday afternoon session closed with a showing of sound motion pictures, made by the State Department of Health, with accompanying lecture by Leon M. Woodworth, publicity agent for the department. Of particular interest was the final film, "Serum to Windham," a film not yet publicly released. The picture dealt with the emergency tactics used in bringing pneumonia serum from a New York laboratory to a home in Windham, Greene county, where a young household had been stricken. The scene was in mid-winter, at night, with the thermometer 20 below zero and a fierce snow storm raging, so that it took two hours for a conveyance to break the roads so that troops could get to Windham, a distance of 35 miles, with the precious serum.

A patrol car of the New York city police department was shown making the journey through the storm to the New York Central station, where it was put on a fast train. The train made an emergency stop at Catskill, where troops from the Catskill substation were waiting to rush it to Windham. It reached the sick boy in time and as a result of the quick work done, and efficiency of this discovery of modern scientific research, his life was saved.

Los Angeles, Oct. 13 (AP)—Accusing Walt Disney of pilfering Swiss yodeling melodies, Raymond Fraumfelder, yodeler and teacher, sued $50,000 damages from the animated cartoon producer. Fraumfelder in a suit filed yesterday charged his melodies were used without his permission in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" after they had been submitted to the Disney studio for a possible sale in March, 1937.

Charles Melick, 29, of 332 East 34th street, New York city was arrested in New York by police officers and turned over to Deputy Sheriff Clayton Vredenburg, who returned Melick to the Ulster county jail to await a hearing before Judge Frederick G. Traver on a seduction charge.

become entitled to vote prior to, or in January 1, 1937. Class (d), like class (c), refers to physically disabled persons. Not coming within any of the aforementioned categories, Davide was not entitled to assistance in voting. The manner in which his vote should have been cast is prescribed in Section 208 of the laws. Departure from the directions therein given rendered his vote null and void for all purposes. See People v. Board of Canvassers, 156 N. Y. 36.

If Davide is thus disfranchised, it is not because of any failure by an administrative officer to perform his functions. The function of voting is that of the individual voter. He is expected to know his rights and the manner in which they may be exercised, in voting in a manner which failed to comply with statutory requirements, Davide effected his own disfranchisement.

Various further departures from the law were made in the manner in which assistance was given in the present case. This subject is covered by Subdivision 1 of Section 203. Quotations from this subdivision follow:

"A voter entitled to assistance in voting may choose two of the election officers, not of the same political faith, to render such assistance, except that at a primary election they may be of the same political faith."

There were no two inspectors present at the time when Davide voted. As a matter of fact, it can be stated that no board of inspectors was functioning at the time. Section 195 of the Election Law provides that "the inspectors shall be a board, and a majority thereof shall decide questions." Tierney alone was without authority to perform the duties cast upon the board of inspectors by the Election Law.

Section 203 (2) further provides: "The inspectors shall enter in two copies of the register, opposite the name of an assisted voter, or in the poll books, if provided, or in the proper remarks column, the name of each officer or person rendering the assistance, and the reason for such assistance." The registers of the third election district of the Town of Ulster are in evidence, and reveal that no such notations were made. This omission disqualifies proceedings of the election of regularly which would otherwise stand.

The section concludes as follows: "The officers or person assisting a voter shall enter the voting booth with him, help him in the preparation of his ballot, and if necessary, in the return of the voted ballot to the inspectors for deposit in the ballot box. The evidence produced at the hearing reveals gross violations of this provision. The voting did not take place in the voting booth, but apparently at the inspector's desk. Tierney not only marked the ballot for Davide, but also deposited it into the box, although it is not shown that Davide was unable to deposit it himself.

These violations of the statute are too numerous to be overladen under any theory of clerical construction. The vote cast by Davide is adjudged to be null and void, and the Board of Elections will be ordered to correct its canvass accordingly. Submit order.

Hancocks Buy California Paper

Robert K. Hancock and his brother, Stanworth K. Hancock, nephews of the late Jay K. Klock, and for some years, up to last June, connected with the Freeman, are in Santa Maria, Calif., where they have purchased the Santa Maria Daily Times.

They will take possession of the paper, considered one of the best small town dailies in California, about November 1. Robert Hancock will act as editor of the Times and Stanworth Hancock will have charge of the business end of the new enterprise.

Santa Maria is a city of about 10,000 inhabitants and is located about 16 miles from the Pacific coast, the nearest large city being Santa Barbara, some 75 miles distant.

The Hancock brothers came to Kingston about nine years ago and became associated with The Freeman, of which their uncle was the editor and publisher. They were continuously connected with Kingston's social activities during their stay here, while Stanworth Hancock was well known as one of the outstanding tennis players of this section.

Mrs. Hancock, mother of the young men, and Miss Lillian Klock, an aunt, and for many years a member of The Freeman staff, expect to leave Kingston later and join them in Santa Maria.

Giants vs. Port Jervis Sunday; Fatta Outpoints Willie Smith

Second Home Tilt For Local Gridders At Athletic Field Crowd Expected

Kington Gridders Looked Good in Opener, Although They Lost to White Plains—Strong Rivalry Sunday

Kington's GE Giants are ready for tough competition Sunday at the Athletic Field where they play their second home game of the season, facing the Port Jervis Trojans. Game time is 2:30 o'clock.

With the Trojans will be several ex-high school gridders, ready to add that keen rivalry that exists between the scholastic bodies of this city and the T. State community. The Trojans, however, have not given out their full lineup.

Last week the Port gridders were to come to Kingston, but cancelled the engagement to open their own home season. Because of the cancellation, the Giants were forced to take on a club like the White Plains Steamrollers, getting a test that they will remember for the rest of the season. Bucking up against the Steamrollers, the GE brigade was forced to play its best brand of football in order to start the fall with a good record. Final result of the duel was 7-0 in favor of the visitors, but despite the loss Kingston showed enough good football to warrant good patronage for tomorrow's game.

In the last drill in preparation for the Trojans, Jerry Dann, coach of the Giants, and Ed Sylvester, who specializes in putting the line through its paces, stressed the aerial attack. Last Sunday, the Kingstonians might have come out on the long end of the score if they came out with a stronger passing game.

With only a few minutes left to play, Bill Thomas started heading forwards to Ray Schneider and the club was going places via this means of ground gaining. The ball rested on the White Plains 30 line when the final whistle blew. Coach Sylvester seemed pleased with his line in last Sunday's game, and looks for improvement against the Trojans, after the drills held this week.

Jack Zaccaro and Charles Ralbe were mainstays against the Steamrollers, and can be counted on to do their bit again when the Port Club rolls out on the gridiron. Football fans who want to keep the game alive in Kingston are asked to turn out and to be as generous as possible in contributing. Financial reports of last Sunday's game were not too encouraging, and the Giants may be forced to take to the road, if there is no improvement this week.

Fair Street Men's Club Gets Softball Trophy

At the second annual softball banquet held Friday evening at the Fair Street Reformed Church the church league softball trophy was awarded to the Fair Street Church Men's Club team, winner of the play-off between that team and the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church team, runner-up. The trophy was presented to Manager "Ted" Young by the Rev. C. C. Chilton of Hurley, who was presented by the president of the Federation, Mr. Jackson.

Prior to awarding the trophy to the winning team a count of representatives from the various churches was made and the runner-up, Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, was found to have the largest representation outside of the host club and an attendance award of a dozen darts for softball was presented by Elston's Sport Shop as a reward. The Rev. Mr. Chilton in presenting the trophy congratulated the winning team and also the losers for the fine spirit of competition which had been shown. He commented the idea of inter-church contests which he said made for fair play and sportsmanship. The trophy was accepted by Manager "Ted" Young, who said that last year Fair Street had been runner-up, this year they came close to being no team because no one could seem to devote the time to managing the team and getting the players out but he had been coaxed into accepting the post and it had been a pleasure to captain and manage the team.

William Newkirk, president of the Fair Street Men's Club, presided as master of ceremonies and presented Secretary Edell How-ers, Senator Arthur H. Wicks the presidents or managers of the visiting teams and representatives of the various clubs. The Rev. P. B. Seelye, pastor of the church, congratulated the players on their victory and spoke of the spirit of sportsmanship which marked the contests.

After a rising vote of thanks had been given the members of the Ladies Aid Society for the dinner there was a program of entertainment provided by the runners up, Clinton Avenue Church, which included several reels of motion pictures shown through the courtesy of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp. by Fred Snyder of that company. Among the films shown was "Vacationland" of the Hudson Valley, a picture made by the Central Hudson showing the many advantages which the Hudson Valley presents as a summer and winter vacation locality. The program of entertainment was under the direction of Mr. Riet.

Apostoli Guest of Huber at the Fights Friday

By Joe Kelly

That was a boner about the Poughkeepsie High School football team yesterday. The team is undefeated. Fred Apostoli dropped in unexpectedly at the boxing bouts last night. What a hand the famous middleweight got! He was with Joe Huber, one of Kingston's better known bowlers. The amateurs seemed to give Fred a thrill as they went on with their slam bang program. That was some tough kid who fought Sempervino. The fans won't forget him, Frankie Tomlinelli, for a long time. A sports fan has written in about a championship match between the Twaal-kill winner and the ace at Wiltsyck golf club. Maybe something can be done. Harry Hutton, secretary of the Mercantile League, is doing a nice job on the standing of the clubs. The Bunce brothers had a bad night at the auditorium, Friday. They blamed it on wearing the same fighting togs. The GE Giants need a lot of good financial support at tomorrow's football game, and are depending on the fans in crowd the bleachers at the Athletic Field.

Eddie Bricey of the Associated Press says Ed Barrow and Joe McCarthy will have fits when they hear those reports from St. Louis that Bill Dickey will be player-manager of the Browns next season. Minnesota sports scribes still are writing about the great fight Purdue put up against the Gophers last Saturday. Why all the hullabaloo about Rogers Hornsby's $10,000 salary at Baltimore as being a minor league record? Didn't Chuck Dressen get that much at Nashville last season? "Notre Dame starts drives at blocking and tackling," says a headline. For goodness sakes, what for?

Tony Palazola, San Francisco promoter, is burned up plenty that he didn't land the Fred Apostoli-Young Corbett match, which would have been a natural out there—and we don't blame him a bit. The Cleveland Plain-Dealer takes exception to the fact that each Cub received $4,674.87 for his World Series share. The Plain Dealer thinks the $7 cents would be more like it. Stu Hemingway, Yale right guard who was injured on the first play in the Penn game, still is under observation in a Philadelphia Hospital.

Puzzle: Who Won?

By The (C) Feature Service
The New York Yankees for your information swept the World Series in four straight games. Some of the faces below you will (unfortunately) recognize. But could you tell from the expressions whether the men won or lost?

You probably guessed wrong on this one. Joe McCarthy, Yankee manager, was pensive as he became the first manager in history to lead a team to three straight Series victories.

This gentleman is registering grief. Or at least, he should be. This is Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cub manager whose team absorbed the licking the Yankees dealt out.

This is Davey Dickey, who can't decide whether he should be cheerful or not. Well, Dickey lost his game, but he made a grand showing. The Yankees got to him only in the eighth.

This is Bill Lee, Cub hurler who tossed four straight shutouts before the World Series. His looks bespeak his feelings. The Yankees sent him to the showers on two occasions.

Monte Pearson of the Yankees pitched and won his ball game, then had a smoke in the dressing room. Here he is registering joy or relief or whatever you choose to call it.

Art Felch of Milwaukee won the title of champion fan at the Series. He awaited the sale of bleacher seats at Wrigley field from September 23. On October 5 he entered, evidently not overjoyed.

Newburgh Ace Is Victor Again in Auditorium Main

Sempervino Wins

Frankie Tomlinelli Proves a Durable Batter—Van Alstyne Kayoed in 34 Seconds of First Round

Carline Fatta, Newburgh's ace lightweight, hung up his seventh win at the municipal auditorium Friday night, outpointing Willie Smith of New York, former international champion.

Fatta bounced a series of hard rights off the jaw of the ex-title holder dumping him into the ropes several times as the crowd went wild yelling for a knockout. But Smith survived.

Among the ringfighters last night was Fred Apostoli, ranking middleweight, a guest of Joe Huber, ace of Kingston's better known boxers.

Fatta won the decision unanimously by piling up a big lead in the first two rounds increasing it in the third with two knockdowns. As Smith bounded in, tossing his best left hand punch, Fatta side-stepped countering with a zooming right.

As the punch caught Smith flush on the jaw, he reeled through the ropes, but came up fighting. Another murderous right put Willie down for nine, and it looked as though he might not arise in time to continue.

Smith traded punches with his hard hitting foe in the fourth and fifth, holding his own. But the early lead Fatta had established won the favor of the officials. The weights, Fatta, 132, Smith, 135.

Frankie Tomlinelli, who might be called New York's toughest lightweight, took everything Vince Sempervino had and was still standing at the finish, fighting away.

The former Hawaiian Islands welter champion cut loose in the opening round, and smothered the little metropolitan Italian with rights and lefts to the jaw. He continued his attack in the second, and it looked like the finish for Tomlinelli.

In an exchange along the ropes during the third frame, the New Yorker landed a right uppercut that slowed Sempervino down. He felt the effects for the remainder of the round, and during the fourth, the Schenectady boy cut loose again and piled up his marks of victory.

The weights were Sempervino 140, Tomlinelli, 179.

Red Van Alstyne, Adirondack A. A. U. middleweight champion, paraded out in 34 seconds of the first round from a cyclonic right on the jaw sent over by Warren Jones, New York 167 pounder.

Other Results
Charlie Harvey, 153, New York, won five round decision over Monk Armstrong, 156, Kingston.
Corky Duganigan, 149, Monroe, outpointed Jack Tracy, 147, Albany, in slow rounds.

Carlo Litz, 131, Albany, defeated Hank Buncer, 134, this city. Buncer was out at the bell.

Joe Dipolo, 122, Albany, knocked out Frankie Dunce, 123, this city, in 50 seconds of third round of three round curtain raiser.

Emmett Ryan of Albany was the referee for last night's bouts, with Tommy Zano and John Flinerty judges. Joe Vozdik was the timekeeper, and Sam Riber did the announcing.

Poughkeepsie at Athletic Field This Afternoon

That Kingston High School vs Poughkeepsie High football classic at the Athletic Field was expected to draw a capacity crowd this afternoon to see the two undefeated eleven fight it out for the gridiron honors.

Kingston, starting off as a green combination for whom some of the experts had little hopes, bumped off the strong Amsterdam club, and then Liberty. Both wins were by the shutout route, 13-0 and 39-0, respectively.

Today, facing their unbeaten Dutchess county foes, the Maroon and White players hoped to keep their record clean.

Carved Up for Charity

East Aurora, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP)—A frightened wild deer which dashed through the postoffice here yesterday without regard for entrances was being carved up for meat for charity today. The deer appeared on the main street late yesterday. It leaped through a plate glass window into the postoffice, across the desk of Postmaster Wayne M. Wright. Then it dashed through the mail room, out a rear door and disappeared. Police trailed it by blood from a gash in its neck and shot it at the edge of town.

A colorful combination for a vegetable plate is baked potato, green broccoli, fried or broiled tomatoes, well-buttered, and a crisp celery stalk stuffed with pimento or seasoned cream cheese.

17TH ANNUAL NAVY DAY to be observed Oct. 27 recalls this scene in New York harbor "way back when" in April, 1889, when pennants flew and men lined the yards in a gay naval review. The U.S.S. The change wrought by the years in U. S. navy craft is apparent from this view of the "oldtimers."

Budgetary increases for naval construction are expected by Admiral William Leahy, chief of naval operations.
